Five Teen-Agers Held in Theft of 40 Cars

D. C. to Pay Its Respects To Nation's War Dead

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Washingtonians today will begin their official celebration of Memorial Day, a day dedicated to the Nation's war dead.

Unofficially, many thousands have been celebrating since Friday night. The four-day holiday saw the usual exodus by regular residents, while tourists from other states poured into the city to see the sights.

The weatherman couldn't promise much for wreath-laying ceremonies. His prediction was for considerable cloudiness, a chance of scattered showers in the afternoon, and perhaps a little warmer than yesterday's high of 67.

A Few Stores Open

Government departments, banks, public libraries and most businesses will be closed for the day, though a few neighborhod stores will be open for business.

Public schools in the District, Virginia, and in Montgomery County, Md. will be closed. In Prince Georges County, Md., schools will be open as usual.

In the District only the criminal division of Municipal Court will be open to handle lock-up and continued cases. County offices in Maryland and Virginia will be closed, but the Montgomery County Council will meet at 2 p. m. for its regular session.

The Montgomery County Orphans Court, which ordinarily meets on Tuesday, will meet Wednesday and Thursday this week, and the Prince Georges County Orphans Court will meet Wednesday.

Shrines Remain Open

Tourists will find the city's national shrines, including the Washington Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, the National Gallery of Art, and the Smithsonian Institution, all open for the day.

Airline, bus, and train terminals all expected that returning weekenders tonight would swell business to about the level of the usual Sunday night crowd. The Greyhound terminal reported that business was not as heavy as expected.

Traffic downtown was heavy yesterday afternoon, and police prepared to devote their attention to the main arteries into and out of the city when the flow of cars reaches its expected peak tonight.

Principal Memorial Day celebration will be at Arlington National Cemetery at 1 p. m. today, when Gen. George C. Marshall, wartime Army Chief of Staff, now president of the American Red Cross, will pay tribute to the Nation's war dead.

Also on the program will be Carl Saunders, editor of the Jackson, Mich., Citizen Patriot and winner of a 1950 Pulitzer prize for his editorial, "A Prayer for Peace."

Missing Tag Traps Young Joy Riders

A gang of five 'teen-age automobile thieves, who police said have stolen at least 40 cars in six months, was rounded up here last night on a tip from a keen-eyed Maryland State Trooper.

The five boys, all from Southeast Washington and ranging in ages from 15 to 17, were arrested after Maryland Police Corpl. Melvin L. Gent stopped the youngest member Sunday afternoon as he drove a 1947 Oldsmobile with only one Maryland license plate near Silver Hill and Suitland rds., Prince Georges County.

In questioning the 15-year-old boy, whose three passengers were later released, police found the car had been stolen.

All Cars Recovered

Further probing by Metropolitan Police led the youth to implicate four companions in a series of auto thefts since January 1. In the 40 cases to which they confessed, all automobiles have been returned to owners.

Precinct Detective F. L. Reinhart and Detective J. J. Wolf, of the Auto Squad, announced after questioning the youths that all would be charged with unauthorized use of the cars.

They had "35 or 40" keys in their possession when rounded up last night, police said. The ringleader explained they stole most of the keys from local garages. Each key would fit the ignition of about one in 20 of a particular type of automobile, which the boys determined by trial-and-error sampling of cars on the streets.

After getting a car started, police reported, the youths would joy-ride until the car ran out of gas. Then they would steal another vehicle in the neighborhood and drive it until its fuel was exhausted.

Many cars were stolen in the District, driven into Maryland or Virginia and abandoned, police reported.

Two of the boys admitted having stolen their own fathers' cars, according to police.

Refused to Admit Guilt

Reinhardt said the first boy arrested at first refused to acknowledge theft of any vehicle but the Oldsmobile he was driving Sunday. He soon began to reel off such a series of thefts, with the aid of his companions, that Wolf was called in to help close the 40 cases.

Asked if he had driven any of the cars at high speeds, one of the boys boasted that he went "over 105 miles per hour" in an Oldsmobile.

All five were still under questioning late last night as police hoped to solve still more auto thefts in and near the District. None had been formally charged at 11:30 p.m.

Lee Reports on Job, Defying Sawyer Call for Resignation

By The Associated Press

Michael E. Lee, $10,000-a-year Commerce Department official whose loyalty was questioned in Congress, yesterday challenged a move to fire him and thus set the stage for a battle to defend his job.

Lee showed up for work as usual, despite a request by Secretary of Commerce Sawyer for his resignation.

Lee, a naturalized citizen, told newsmen he had asked for an interview with Sawyer. However, Sawyer is out of town and is not expected back before Wednesday or Thursday.

Department officials said they are drafting ouster charges against Lee and William W. Remington, 32, another $10,000-a-year Commerce employe, for presentation later in the week. Sawyer has demanded that both Lee and Remington resign "in the interest of good administration."

Remington was not at his office yesterday. He had previously arranged for a holiday and is not due to return to work until Thursday. He is scheduled to appear

High Court Action Brings Prison Near For Movie Figures And Anti-Fascists

Ten Hollywood figures and 11 members of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee moved closer to jail yesterday when the Supreme Court refused to reconsider cases affecting them.

The court first refused in 1948 to consider the case of the refugee committee group, all of whom had been convicted of contempt of Congress for refusing in 1946 to produce their books and records for the House Un-American Activities Committee. The organization is on the Attorney General's subversive list (and the court has agreed to consider a case next fall testing the validity of such a list).

Of the 10 Hollywood writers and directors, two—Dalton Trumbo and John Howard Lawson—fought their contempt of Congress convictions through to the Supreme Court. The high court refused to consider their cases last month and yesterday refused for the last time.

8 Similarly Bound

Eight other Hollywood figures involved in similar contempt of Congress proceedings—also involving the House Un-American Activities Committee—have agreed to be bound by the legal rules in the Lawson-Trumbo case. They now will be brought into District Court here, where the Government will ask that they likewise be sentenced.

All 10 refused to answer questions as to whether they had been members of the Communist Party. The effect of the Supreme Court ruling was to uphold a Court of Appeals decision that "the right of free speech is not absolute but must yield to national interests justifiably thought to be of larger importance. The same is true of the right to remain silent."

The Hollywood figures had contended they had a right to refuse to answer because to be forced to do so would violate their constitutional rights. Another case, testing the right to refuse to answer the Communist question on the grounds of self-incrimination, will be considered by the high court next fall.

Lawson and Trumbo were fined $1000 each and sentenced to jail for a year. The eight others are Adrian Scott, Herbert Biberman, Edward Dmytryk, Ring Lardner, jr., Samuel Ornitz, Lester Cole, Alvah Bessie and Albert Maltz.

In the Anti-Fascist case, the defendants are Elward C. Barsky, the chairman; novelist Howard Fast, and Lyman R. Bradley, Louis S. Miller, Jacob Auslander, Mrs. Charlotte Stern, Harry M. Justiz, Mrs. Ruth Leider, Manuel Magana and Mrs. Marjorie Chodorov, all of New York, and James Lustig of Newark, N. J.

Each of the 11 was fined $500; Barsky was sentenced to six months in jail and the other 10 to

$2,250,000 Set Aside by U. S. For District Slum Clearance

The Federal Government yesterday set aside a $2,250,000 capital grant for District slum clearance and urban redevelopment only 11 days after the commissioners asked for the sum.

The reservation of funds—something new in the District's recently frustrated slum clearance program—was approved by the Housing and Home Finance Agency at the request of District heads.

The money will remain earmarked for District use only on redevelopment projects the District Redevelopment Land Agency can start by July 1, 1951.

The reservation, authorized under the Housing Act of 1949, is not a final commitment by either the Government or the commissioners, since loans and actual grants are signed only on basis of specific, approved projects.

The Federal aid is to compensate the District for the loss it may incur in preparing a blighted area for redevelopment.

The commissioners turned to the Federal housing agency for help after trying unsuccessfully for more than three years to obtain slum clearance funds from Congress under its own specially tailored Redevelopment Act. The local law authorizes a 20-million-dollar revolving fund for District slum riddance.

In seeking the reservation of Federal funds on May 18, the Commissioners made clear they were not certain they could avail themselves of it.

Assistant Engineer Commissioner Thomas J. Hayes 3d explained the Commissioners asked for the money for use during the coming fiscal year so that the District may move ahead "if ready."

The "if," and it looms as a large one, is that Uncle Sam does not turn over the cash until the District has listed specific local slum areas it wants to redevelop.

The job of picking slum sites to attack is assigned to the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. NCPPC has only recently started thinking seriously about recommending possible sites. It's coordinating committee on housing and redevelopment is expected to come up with some site proposals at the commission's next meeting, the end of June.

If the coordinating committee does have site proposals ready,

Jail Inmate's Death Laid to Heart Failure

Leroy Davis, 30-year-old inmate of the District Jail, died April 28 of acute heart failure. He had a chronic heart condition.

There were "no marks of violence detected, as well as no marks made by strangulation."

This was the substance of a two-page report submitted yesterday by Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District Coroner, to United States Attorney George Morris Fay.

Davis, who was awaiting trial on a charge of housebreaking, collapsed after a struggle with jail guards.

Dr. MacDonald's report says that:

"It is impossible to state whether this acute congestive heart failure had its inception at the time this patient was in an excited state or during the continuation of the tussle and restraint resulting therefrom while (a) sedative was administered."

A jail guard, James E. Kirkpatrick, admitted he wrapped a towel around Davis' neck during the struggle. Kirkpatrick was forced to take leave from his job.

Whether the 33-year-old Kirkpatrick, of 1229 Savannah pl., se., returns to his job depends on whether Fay decides to submit the case to the grand jury, said Donald Clemmer, director of the District Department of Corrections.

Clemmer added that Kirkpatrick's use of the towel "is contrary to jail regulations."

Clemmer said he has been in

Jury Refuses To Indict in Baby's Death

The District grand jury refused yesterday to indict Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Kelley in the death of their four-month-old daughter last March.

The jury ignored a homicide charge placed against the youthful couple after the coroner's jury found them responsible for the infant's death.

Kelley, a 29-year-old decorated wartime fighting pilot, has completed his third year at Catholic University, where he is studying aeronautics. His wife, Elizabeth, 21, is Austria-born, and is again pregnant, reporters were told.

The child, Eileen, died of a fractured skull at the Kelley home, 380 Hemlock st. nw. Although police originally reported the child may have strangled while sucking a bottle of orange juice, Mrs. Kelley steadfastly maintained that Eileen fell from her arms during the feeding.

Through their attorney, Donald H. Dalton, the Kelleys said:

"We wish to thank our friends at Catholic University, in the National Guard and in our neighborhood for having faith in us during the trying period since our daughter's death."

At the time of the inquest, Deputy Coroner Christopher J. Murphy said the injury to the child's skull was of such a nature he did not believe a fall from the mother's arms could have caused it.

The grand jury gave no reason for ignoring the charge.

Forty-five indictments were returned before Judge Alexander Holtzoff in District Court. Fourteen cases were ignored.

Women's 'Lung Spots' Prove to Be Falsies

Atlanta, May 29 (AP).—A number of women, obviously in good health, turned out to have lung spots during a city-wide health survey here.

Puzzled doctors studied and studied the X-rays, baffled by the fact that the spots showed on both lungs and in identical positions.

Finally a doctor who had encountered such shadows for the first time in 1946 enlightened his comrades. "Falsies," he explained.

300 Troops Reach Tenn. Strike Scene

Morristown, Tenn., May 29 (U.P.).—National Guardsmen in full fighting garb rolled up to the strike-embattled American Enka Corp. textile mill today and stood guard with fixed bayonets while non-strikers left the premises.

There was no trouble. About 20 cars carrying workers who had been held inside the mill until the troops arrived passed through the gate while some 100 helmeted Guardsmen stood three paces apart on each side of the highway.

State highway patrolmen guarded all roads out of the area and escorted the automobiles home.

The 300 troopers were ordered in by Gov. Gordon Browning as a "last resort" to put down violence, including the dynamiting of nonstrikers' property.

Sheriff Robert Medlin deputized all troops as they arrived. Authorities said they thought that would be preferable to declaring martial law.

A jeep mounting a machinegun took up a position about 75 feet from the plant entrance as the troops lined each side of the road between CIO textile union pickets and a crowd of strikers who yelled insults at the Guardsmen.

"The crowd was pretty orderly," said Brig. Gen. Dwight McReynolds, commanding the 278th Infantry.

Browning called out the Guard after hearing reports that "professional agitators" came to Morristown over the week end to stir up further violence."

Automobiles carrying would-be workers were upset near the plant entrance and rock and egg showers

Stalin Would Meet Truman, Lie Reports, but With a Big 'If'

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Premier Stalin would not be "hostile" to a new meeting with President Truman and maybe with other heads of states—if the subject matter of such a meeting could be worked out carefully in advance.

This noncommittal remark from the master of the Kremlin was part of the story brought to the President and to Secretary Acheson yesterday by Secretary General Trygve Lie of the United Nations.

Lie has just finished a round of visits to Moscow and other European capitals in the hope of finding some way to ease East-West tensions and end the present Soviet boycott of U. N. sessions.

Like Truman's Comment

The Stalin remark about a new meeting of heads of states—with an enormous "if"—was on a par with President Truman's repeated assurances that he would be glad to see Stalin at any time—if Stalin came here. In the present state of international affairs, the working out of an agenda would be as improbable as Stalin's arrival at the National Airport here.

Lie himself insisted, on leaving the White House, that he had not brought any message from Stalin to the President. He declined to say whether he felt encouraged by his trip.

He did call attention to his statement at a press conference last Friday, that the Soviet leaders still had faith in the U. N.

Secretary Acheson has repeatedly taken the position that the United States would not meet with the Russians to discuss matters affecting other nations unless those other nations were represented too.

He has also said that the United States will always be glad to meet with the Russians in the U. N. or some other appropriate forum. The recent four-power discussions on the Austrian treaty, which have ended in utter deadlock, have not encouraged American officials to think that other four-power meetings would be more productive.

As for the Soviet boycott in the U. N., Lie brought no evidence that it would end until the Chinese Communists were seated as delegates in place of the Chinese Nationalists.

On this he found the American position the same as before he left

Whooping Cranes' Historic Offspring Missing in Texas

Austwell, Tex., May 29 (U.P.).—Rusty, the first whooping crane born in captivity, was missing today and presumed dead.

There was no sign of the spindly-legged chick on the Aransas National Wildlife Refuge where it was born Friday to Joe and Crip, two of the 37 known whooping cranes in existence.

Julius Howard, manager of the refuge, said Rusty may have fallen prey to snakes, raccoons or vultures, which occasionally slip into the 150-acre enclosure.

Rusty may have died from natural causes, Howard said. He was seen last taking food from the mother crane yesterday. Today both parents ranged far from their feeding grounds and there was no sign of Rusty.

N. Y. Grand Jury Serves Subpenas for Bank Files Of Joe and His Family

New York, May 29 (AP).—Subpenas calling for the production of bank records and the appearance of bank officials from New Jersey before the New York County Grand Jury investigating bookmaker Frank Erickson's gambling activities were served today.

The subpenas, issued by General Sessions Judge Owen W. Bohan, were served under the reciprocal witness statute, District Attorney Frank S. Hogan announced.

They call for bank records relating to accounts in the names of Joseph Doto (otherwise known as Joe Adonis, an underworld figure), his wife, Jean Doto, and his son, Joseph Doto, jr., Hogan said.

The subpenas also call for records of a Newark, N. J., accounting firm relating to the Colonial Inn, now known as Green Acres, north of Miami near Hollywood, Fla.

Records seized in a raid on Erickson's offices indicated he profited heavily from gambling operations in the one-time plush Florida casino. A number of underworld characters were linked to the Colonial Inn operations by the records.

Erickson's attorney, Sol Gelb, tried in vain today to get the Erickson records back. Judge Bohan refused to order their return.

Big-Timers Reported Heading for Cuba and Mexico, Kefauver Says

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

A chief reason Senate crime investigators hustled down to Miami last week was the reported departure for Cuba and Mexico of big-time gamblers.

A further report that interested the Senators was that the gamblers were destroying their records.

This was learned yesterday as Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the special crime committee gave reporters a few clews as to the gleanings picked up by himself and Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) in their two-day visit to Miami.

He said "some new information" has been turned up about Frank Erickson, the big bookmaker now under investigation in New York, where his records have been seized.

Committee Counsel Rudolph Halley was in New York yesterday to give District Attorney Frank S. Hogan a fill-in on the new dope on Erickson. Halley had conferred with Hogan before the flying visit to Miami.

Kefauver indicated that the Miami findings, both as to books of the Green Acres gambling resort, near Fort Lauderdale, and as to various witnesses interviewed would help bolster whatever case

Business Voted More Time To Offset Losses for Taxes

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

In a move to encourage new business ventures and expansion of old-line concerns, the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday voted all companies and individuals in trade or business a longer period to offset losses for tax purposes.

Committee spokesmen termed the action, providing seven years instead of five for tax offsets, a "better break" for small and new businesses and encouraging to risk capital generally.

The House unit, nearing a showdown probably Thursday on the President's call for increased corporation taxes, approved virtually without change the Administration's "loss carryover and carryback" recommendations.

Staff experts said the change would result in no revenue losses the first year, but probably would cost the Treasury 100 million dollars over a five-year period.

The present law permits business concerns to carry losses back for two years and forward for two years, for the purpose of offsetting taxes paid in years when the company made a profit.

The liberalization adopted yesterday limits the "carryback" to one year but permits a five-year carry-forward of losses, or a total of seven years to effect adjustments. It would apply to operating losses in the 1950 taxable year and thereafter.

For example, a company that suffered a $150,000 loss in 1950, but netted a $100,000 profit in

Urologists Learn Of New Operation

Opens Heart Valve

Finger-Knife Surgery Aids D. C. Woman

Mrs. James J. Reynolds, 1712 Surrey la. nw., wife of the National Labor Relations Board member, is recovering from a delicate operation at Hahnemann Hospital, Philadelphia, in which a faulty heart valve was opened by a surgeon using a tiny knife on his forefinger.

Dr. Charles Bailey, head of the hospital's chest department, which developed the technique involved, reached the heart through the side, between the fourth and fifth ribs, temporarily collapsing the lung. The knife, loosely strapped on the right forefinger, was guided by the surgeon's left forefinger. The operation took less than three hours.

About 50 similar operations have been performed at the Philadelphia hospital by Dr. Bailey and his staff, all but seven having saved the patients from certain death, Dr. Bailey said. Mrs. Reynolds is now able to walk in her room.

An operation which uses part of the large intestine to form an artificial bladder was described yesterday at an opening session of the forty-fifth annual meeting of the American Urological Association.

The operation, described at the start of the urologists' four-day meeting in the Statler Hotel, was developed at Presbyterian Hospital, Chicago, by Drs. James W. Merricks, R. K. Gilchrist, Howard Hamlin and I. T. Reiger.

At the same session another Illinois man, Carl Richard Moore, professor of zoology at the University of Chicago, was honored with the association's fifth annual award in recognition of his more than 30 years' research on the male reproductive tract.

In the bladder operation, an artificial bladder is formed by cutting off a portion of the large bowel near the appendix and sewing up its ends to form a pouch. The tubes from the kidneys are transplanted to this dead-end pouch. Leading also from the pouch is the ileum, a part of the small intestine, which is routed to the outside of the body.

The patient is then able to empty the artificial bladder by inserting a rubber tube through the ileum and into the pouch.

A normal valve arrangement prevents leakage from the pouch into the ileum, according to Merricks, associate professor of urology at the University of Illinois Medical School.

At the same time, the main portion of the small intestine is sewn to the large bowel, above the portion removed to form the pouch, and this allows continuation of the normal function of the intestines. The operation was developed at Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago.

Police Retire Pvt. Bradley; Son Carries On

Pvt. Charles H. Bradley, 60, one of four members of his immediate family to serve as a policeman, will leave the Metropolitan Police Department Wednesday. But there's another Bradley being groomed to take his place.

Charles Bradley Evans Bradley

Ever since Bradley's father, John F. Bradley, served on the force—he had 37 years when he died in 1929—the family tradition has been carried on.

Charles has a son, Pvt. Evans H. Bradley, who is a veteran of eight years on the force. Another son, Charles F. Bradley, served with the Traffic Division before he was killed in World War II when his Coast Guard destroyer escort, the USS Leopold, was torpedoed in the North Atlantic.

Now that it's established among the Bradleys that wanting to be a cop is more than a childhood ambition, the 4-year-old son of Evans—named Charles F. for his late uncle—aspires to the role of his elders.

The retiring Bradley, who lives at 2801 20th st. ne., will step down after 28 years in the law-enforcement trade. He joined in 1917, left it in 1918, but returned in 1923 as a motorcycle policeman.

In 1926 he participated in the capture of three men who had murdered one fellow officer and wounded another. Bradley spent 15 years at Precinct No. 12, and is now assigned to the liaison office at Municipal Court.

Budget Bureau Opposes Boost In Road Aid

President Truman's budget advisers, pointing out the Government is operating in the red, yesterday objected to any increase in Federal aid for highway construction at this time.

Elmer B. Staats, assistant director of the Budget Bureau, told a Senate Public Works Subcommittee it would be unwise in the present fiscal situation to increase the 500-million-dollar-a-year Federal grants to the States for roads.

The committee is holding hearings on a bill that would authorize 650 million dollars of grants and total Federal road-building expenditures of 961 million dollars annually for each of the next two fiscal years, beginning July 1.

A highway measure recently passed by the House would permit Federal grants of $646,500,000 for each of the two years.

Staats urged retention of the present 50-50 matching basis on which Federal highway grants are made to the States. A provision in the House bill would allow the Federal share to rise to 75 percent in some cases.

He also advocated keeping, as the Senate bill does, the present formula of determining each State's share of the Federal funds on the basis of a State's population, area and highway mileage.

Two spokesmen for the American Road Builders Association—Col. E. R. Needles of New York, president, and Lieut. Gen. Eugene Reybold of Washington, executive vice president—urged one billion dollars a year of Federal highway grants.

They said more than 11 billion dollars worth of work needs to be done on the interstate highway system. They also said that on these highways "the Federal contribution should be increased from the traditional 50-50 basis to 75 percent as a temporary measure in these days of uneasy peace."

2 Youths Held On Auto, Movie Larceny Charges

Two youths were held for grand jury action yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on charges of automobile larceny and breaking and entering.

The youths, Edward E. Boswell, 18, and William A. Fletcher, 16, both gave their address as 3608 39th ave., Colmar Manor. Bond was set by Judge Alan Bowie at $600 apiece. Fletcher waived juvenille court jurisdiction before appearing in police court.

They were charged by Mount Rainier police with theft of an automobile in Mount Rainier on May 15 and the theft of $7 in cash and $5 in candy from the Cameo Theater, Mount Rainier, February 26. Both plead guilty to the first charge and not guilty to the second.

Drive-in Movie Plan Set Back By Park Unit

The Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday recommended denial of a rezoning application to build a drive-in theater in Hillside.

The commission recommended denial of the application of Stanley B. Frosh, owner of the 15-acre Hoile tract adjoining the old Maryland Club Gardens for commercial listing. Final action will be taken by the Prince Georges County commissioners.

The Frosh application was one of five for which denial was recommended. Three received a favorable opinion.

Fred W. Tuemmler, commission planning director, in his report to the planning body declared he "can think of no worse location along the Marlboro pike for such a use than on this property."

The two-lane highway carries a daily average traffic load of 5380 vehicles in that area, Tuemmler stated. He added that two of the "sharpest and most hazardous curves on the highway lie east and west of the applicant's property."

Erection of a drive-in theater there would, he said, increase traffic hazards and "abet the potential danger to life and limb of motorists using this highway."

The commission and its planning director agreed, however, that the front 200 feet of the tact could properly be rezoned for commercial use.

Regarding drive-in theaters generally, the commission's opinion stated that they should be so placed that the majority of traffic would enter by making a right turn from the highway. In the case under consideration, it was pointed out, most vehicles would make left turns from Marlboro pike.

In another action, the commission favorably recommended application for commercial listing of 32,590 square feet on Defense hwy. near Lanham. In so doing, the commission disregarded Tuemmler's recommendation for denial.

The land in question, for which reclassification was sought by John F. Lillard, agent, adjoins a five-acre tract now listed as commercial.

Tuemmler pointed out that only 1¼ acres of this land is now used for commercial purposes and that the remainder is vacant and partly wooded.

Rather than increase the commercial area at that location, the planning director recommended that the commission take steps to reduce the commercial section.

The commission, however, took the view that granting the request would be a "logical extension of existing commercial zoning."

Barry Freer Made Aide by Trade Board

Barry Freer, 25, yesterday was named assistant manager of the Greater National Capital Committee of the Washington Board of Trade.

Freer

Appointment of Freer was announced by Joseph C. McGarraghy, chairman of the committee.

Freer, a former page in the U. S. Senate, served with the Navy for three years during the war, and was stationed aboard the LST 52. He received an associate in arts certificate from George Washington University, and is attending night law classes at the university.

He formerly was employed by the International Telecommunications Union at Atlantic City, N. J. Freer lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Freer, at 4834 Quebec st. nw.

30-Hour-Week Plea Set Aside

Atlantic City, N. J., May 29 (AP).—The International Ladies Garment Workers Union (AFL) today set aside a demand for a 30-hour week.

Ten resolutions calling for the 30-hour week were presented at the union's golden jubilee convention. The resolutions committee recommended turning over the demand to the general executive board for further study.

"We must recognize that considerable sections of our own industry still operate on a work week above 35 hours, while a very large portion of American workers labor 40 or more hours a week," the committee said.

"The 30-hour week goal cannot, therefore, be made a rigid immediate objective in every situation, either for the labor movement as a body or for our own union."

Senator Hubert H. Humphrey (D., Minn.) said that the Republican party "is engaging in a smear political campaign rather than discussing the issues which face the American people."

Humphrey reiterated his statement that "the welfare state is a legitimate objective" and said Republicans have made communism a "political football."

Boy, 5, Critically Injured When Hit by Truck Near Home

A 5-year-old Arlington boy was critically injured near his home early last night when he was struck by a truck.

The child, John Rodman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Rodman of 707 N. Wayne st., Arlington, suffered a fractured right arm, ruptured bladder and other internal injuries, shock and bruises. His condition at Arlington Hospital last night was listed as "very critical."

Police quoted the driver of the truck, Vernon Roscoe Pearson, 28, of Vienna, Va., as saying that he saw the child playing in the yard, then heard a "thud."

No Charge Placed

The child, police said, apparently was struck by the right rear end of the van-type vehicle.

No charges were placed against Pearson, police reported.

A two-car collision near Madison, Va., Sunday claimed its third fatality yesterday. He was Furman Limeburner, jr., of Philadelphia, whose father, Col. Furman Limeburner, sr., also was injured in the crash.

At Prince Frederick, Md., Francis P. Beck, 28, of 5200 V st. se., remained in serious condition as the result of injuries suffered Sunday. A car driven by Edward L. Preetorious, 27, of the Annapolis Hotel, Washington, left the road and turned over. Preetorious was not hurt.

Released on Bond

Leonard R. Brigham, 20, of Colesville, Md., held on a technical charge of manslaughter Sunday night in the traffic death of an 18-year-old bicyclist, was released on personal bond yesterday. A hearing in the case will be held June 6 in the Silver Spring Police Court.

Brigham's car struck a bike driven by James S. Powell, 18, of Avenel st., Silver Spring. Young Powell died instantly, apparently of a brain consussion.

The accident occurred on the Colesville pike at Notley rd., in Silver Spring, at 10:45 p. m. Sunday. Brigham reported that he was blinded by headlights on an oncoming car and could not see Powell, who was riding in the same direction he was.

Seven Traffic Charges Bring Fine, Jail Term

Otis Mitchell, 23, of 637 South Carolina ave. se., was sentenced yesterday to serve 90 days in jail and pay a $175 fine for seven traffic charges—and he has one more charge to face.

Mitchell was arrested Saturday night after a traffic spree which culminated, according to police, when he knocked down Police Pvt. Vincent G. Lusby with an automobile and dragged him half a block while driving away.

In Municipal Court, Judge Nadine Gallagher sentenced Mitchell for driving without a permit, two hit-and-run charges involving two parked cars, driving on the sidewalk, driving on the wrong side of a street, unreasonable speed and driving over a loading platform.

On an eighth charge, assault with a dangerous weapon, the automobile, Mitchell was held for grand jury action.

Taft Backs Six GOP Southern Leaders Blasted by Rep. Scott

By The Associated Press

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) yesterday took a firm stand for six Southern Republican chieftains accused by Representative Hugh Scott (R., Pa.) of "selling their party 'down the river' for patronage and power."

Scott, former chairman of the Republican National Committee who resigned after an interparty fight in favor of Guy Gabrielson of New Jersey, made those charges during a radio interview here Saturday night.

Reece a Target

His targets were Carroll Reece of Tennessee, former GOP chairman, and the Republican National Committeemen from Texas, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississippi, and South Carolina, all of whom have been friendly to Taft.

"The men named by Mr. Scott are among the most conscientious Republicans," Taft said. "They command respect of both Democrats and Republicans in thier respective States.

"No one with any sense could question Carroll Reece's Republicanism. In 1948 he put on the most strenuous campaign that Tennessee has ever seen."

Reece was defeated for the Senate in 1948 by Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.).

The latest spat within the Republican family came as strategists worked on plans to wrest Senate control from the Democrats.

Johnson Reports

Victor A. Johnson, campaign director for the Republican Senatorial committee who "shadowed" President Truman on his recent trip to the West Coast, has told the committee that Mr. Truman's personal influence would play but a minor role in the November elections.

In an oral report to the group headed by Senator Brewster (R., Me.), Johnson said he is certain that Mr. Truman can't use his influence to either help or hurt Congressional candidates in the 1950 election.

He advised the committee that it "shouldn't dismiss lightly the President's trip, but neither should it be overawed by it."

Johnson declared he fully expects the Republicans to hold their present Senate strength while picking up the seven additional seats they need for control.

He conceded that if the Republicans fail in their bid for control this year, their prospects for getting it in 1952—even with a Republican Presidential victory—would be slight.

The reason is this: 23 Democrats and 13 Republican seats are at stake this November. In 1952 the ratio will be reversed with 20 Republicans and only 12 Democrats—largely in the South—before the voters.

9 States Analyzed

Johnson said he likes Republican prospects to unseat Democrats in these nine States (name of Democratic incumbent in parenthesis):

Illinois, (Lucas); Pennsylvania, (Myers); California, (Downey); Idaho, (Taylor); New York, (Lehman); Washington, (Magnuson); Connecticut, (McMahon and Benton); Utah, (Elbert Thomas), and Nevada, (McCarran).

Six of the States were on or near the President's Western itinerary and Johnson said that while not discounting the effects of Mr. Truman's personal appearances, "I don't think he made as much hay as he thinks."

Johnson said the reports he has received from Colorado indicate that the Republican organization "has got into stride" behind Senator Millikin (R., Colo.).

He added that he also expects Senator Capehart (R., Ind.) to pull through in Indiana and the GOP nominee to win in Iowa. Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) is generally expected to win the GOP nomination June 5.

Ex-Gob Wins Top Honors At Annapolis

Annapolis, Md., May 29 (AP).—Midshipman Robert R. Monroe of Knoxville, Tenn., was named honor man of the Naval Academy today.

A former seaman who won a competitive examination for appointment to Annapolis, he will be graduated as an ensign on Friday at the head of his class.

Monroe thus won distinction both in the classroom and on the parade ground. He commands the color company, the fourteenth, finest of 36 in the brigade. Charlotte Anderson of Knoxville was Monroe's choice to be June Week color girl.

Monroe finished the four-year course with the highest academic mark in a class of 691.

The academy said he had a "percentile" of 1038.70 out of a possible 1120 points.

No. 2 man in the class was Charles Dobony, 24, of Buffalo, N. Y., with a percentile of 1026.13. Third was David S. Boyd, 22, of Santa Barbara, Calif., with 1025.02.

Monroe and Miss Anderson will be the center of attention on Thursday at the presentation of the colors. While the brigade stands at attention she will transfer the national and brigade flags from last year's color company, the twenty-second, to Monroe as commander of the fourteenth.

Intermittent showers and a glum overcast failed to obscure June Week's sparkle today.

Midshipmen in parade uniforms marched in review before Vice Admiral John W. Roper, Navy chief of personnel, on Worden Field.

"Youngsters" staged their hop tonight in Macdonough Hall. Youngsters are third classmen—who would be sophomores at a civilian institution.

Man 'Reforms' After Stolen Auto Crashes

A convicted automobile thief, who said he "got religion" after turning over seven times in a stolen car Saturday, was held in $3000 bond yesterday by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence.

Louis Edward Faber, 29, Silver Hill, Md., was arrested at 2 a. m. Saturday 3½ miles from Breezy Point, Md., after he lost control of the car he was driving and upset. He escaped serious injury.

Police said the car, owned by Edward H. Jarvins, Woodland Beach, Md., was stolen from a parking lot at 712 9th st. nw.

Faber got out of jail May 10 after serving 18 months of a two-year term for three auto thefts, Faber told police.

When Faber was arraigned by Detective John J. Wolf and Precinct Detective John L. Connors, charged with stealing the car, Commissioner Lawrence asked him:

"Did it make you religious to turn over in the car?"

"Yes, sir. When I got out from under it, I saw the light," Faber replied. "I'll never steal another one."

U. S. Price Reporters End 3-Day Parley

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Government price reporters from the Nation's fruit and vegetable and dairy and poultry markets wound up three days of shop talk today.

The 69 men who keep tab on the prices of the commodities at most points where producers sell their output agreed things would be easier for them if standard terms could be applied to all markets.

It was decided that C. D. Schoolcraft, superintendent of the 43 fruit and vegetable market reporters, and L. M. Davis, head of the 26 dairy and poultry reporters, would work up a standard dictionary of market terms which may be offered to the trade later on.

It was the grst get-together of the Agriculture Department reporters in 33 years.

Richmond Woman Dies In Plunge

MRS. WIRT H. HATCHER . . . leaps to death

Richmond, Va., May 29 (AP).—Mrs. Wirt H. Hatcher, 50, wife of a vice president of the Philip Morris Tobacco Co., died today in a plunge from the tenth floor of the Mutual Building at Richmond's busy 9th and Main sts.

The official police verdict was suicide.

Papers found in the woman's purse gave her name as Mrs. Mary P. Hatcher and listed addresses at Virginia Beach and Richmond.

Police learned a divorce between Mrs. Hatcher and her husband was pending and that she had been in ill health.

Police said a car driven by Mrs. Hatcher plunged through a fence at the south end of 2d st. onto the railroad tracks there yesterday. She was injured slightly.

Mrs. Hatcher is survived by her husband, a son, Wirt H. Hatcher, jr., and her mother, Mrs. Fred B. Evensen, Richmond.

Emerick Deputy Head Of Customs Service

Chester A. Emerick, 30-year veteran of the Customs Service, was chosen yesterday to be deputy commissioner. He will succeed Edson J. Shamhart, who is retiring Wednesday.

Commissioner Frank Dow said Emerick will be in charge of the Customs Bureau Division of Investigations.

A 51-year-old native of Tacoma, Wash., Emerick is being promoted from his current post as supervising customs agent at Miami, Fla., where he has been stationed since 1947.

Mother Raped And Beaten In Baltimore

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—A 32-year-old mother of two children was found nude, bleeding, and unconscious under a viaduct today and police said she had been attacked and "brutally beaten."

Minutes after two patrolmen found the young housewife, a man was arrested by a radio car crew and held for questioning.

The woman was taken to Mercy Hospital for treatment of a possible skull fracture, head and body cuts, shock and severe brush burns.

Investigators thought she had been dragged along the ground about 30 feet after being attacked. Her blood-stained garments were found some distance away.

Police said the shirt of the 23-year-old man taken into custody bore fresh blood stains.

The woman, police said, was still incoherent in the hospital this morning. Her husband is ill in another hospital.

'Bottling Up' Hormones by Patent Denied

Published statements that certain hormone derivatives have been "bottled up" under patent monopolies by the Schering Corp. are denied by officials of the firm.

In denying the statements, carried by The Washington Post last Friday in Walter Winchell's column, firm president Francis C. Brown declared in part:

"The published statements that Corp. or its management have failed to comply with Government directives relating to the patent licensing or have stopped issuing licenses under patents of German origin owned by it are completely false."

Brown also said, "The facts are that irrevocable licenses to market the horome derivatives, prenenolene and progesterone, have been issued for the life of Schering's patents to 15 American pharmaceutical manufacturers at reasonably royalty rates.

"In addition, nine bulk chemical suppliers have been given royalty-free permission to supply the requirements of the drug trade for these products."

7 Far East Nations Seek Bigger Role

Baguio, Philippines, May 29 (U.P.).—Seven Far Eastern nations today called for an "atmosphere of freedom" for Asia and demanded a greater say in world councils dealing with their problems.

Delegates, climaxing five days of conference here, drew up a draft resolution chiding Western powers for deliberating on Far Eastern problems without consulting the nations concerned.

It was the only militant note in the resolution, which will be adopted formally Tuesday. It was silent on communism, biggest problem in the jittery Far East.

Delegates set up no permanent organization. The only machinery for putting conference recommendations into effect was the appointment of U. N. Assembly President Carlos P. Romulo as a one-man coordinator among the seven nations.

Observers believed the demand for a greater say on their problems was aimed at the Big Three foreign ministers' recent London meeting, where Far Eastern problems were discussed with no Far East representatives present.

The conference delegates recommended to their own governments that they "insure that, in consideration of special problems of south and southeast Asia, the point of view of the peoples of this area is prominently kept in mind by any conference dealing with such problems so that better understanding and cordial relations may subsist between countries in the region and other countries of the world."

The conference recommended a broad program for improving economic, social and cultural relations among the participating nations.

The seven nations represented are the Philippines, Australia, Pakistan, India, Ceylon, Indonesia and Thailand.

Berlin, May 29 (A.P.).—Western chiefs today claimed a great bloodless victory in the failure of Communist youth to make good on boasts they would "storm all Berlin."

But United States High Commissioner John L. McCloy joined other leaders in warning that the West must meet the totalitarian challenge in this front-line city with even sharper vigilance from now on in view of the regimented power displayed by the East here this weekend.

On the other hand, Communist leaders appeared jubilant at what they felt was the psychological impact of their show.

"The victory was ours," said Maj. Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, United States commandant. "Sunday was the day Berlin was to fall but the challenge was met."

Reuter Hails Victory

"Without actual fighting we have won a struggle during the Whitsuntide holidays," declared West Berlin's mayor, Ernest Reuter. "However, we must have no illusions that the Eastern dictatorship has given up its schemes to take Berlin."

Reuter's statements were made at a news conference and in an exchange of greetings with Socialist leader Kurt Schumacher of West Germany.

Schumacher declared "the Whitsuntide holidays have shown that the concentrated power of dictatorship is doomed to failure if the forces of democracy have enough courage to defy it."

Responsible spokesmen did not discount the Communist force that massed 500,000 disciplined youths here. Many watchers, particularly German, found frightening the automatic performance in adulation of Stalin and the presence of battalions of soldierly people's police.

McCloy Points to Lesson

"This demonstration was a serious affair—serious in that it showed what a police state can do to regiment people, particularly the young," declared McCloy.

McCloy said the demonstration revealed "the constant need of all free peoples in Berlin and elsewhere to remain steadfast and alert. In the days ahead it is important for the peoples of the democratic nations to realize that the Communist threat can be met and overcome only by wise and liberal leadership and by united action in all fields."

General Taylor also told his news conference that "we do not want to be complacent. This march of Communist-controlled youth was a sobering resemblance to the old Nazi days. It showed that the fight for Berlin is not a game which is finished by Whitsunday."

The American radio station RIAS said 500 Communist youths had called or telephoned during the rally asking aid for a getaway from Eastern Germany or offering to spread Western propaganda in the Soviet zone.

At least 25 deserters formally requested asylum in west Berlin.

The mayor of an east German town turned up in west Berlin today as the latest refugee. Western authorities withheld his name.

Meanwhile the youth demonstration, which continues through Tuesday, ran through a program of sports events and vaudeville shows, topped off by torchlight parades in six parts of east Berlin tonight.

Berlin's sector borders remained quiet except for a few arrests.

IRO Reports 10,000 Quit Red Areas

Geneva, May 29 (A.P.).—Officials of the International Refugee Organization estimated today that some 10,000 persons have fled from the Communist countries of eastern Europe during the past seven months.

These refugees were theoretically eligible for IRO aid, the officials said, but were excluded from such aid in practice by a decision taken by the IRO General Council last summer.

Council's Action

The council ruled then that refugees arriving from eastern Europe in Germany, Austria and Italy after October 15, 1949, would receive the IRO's legal protection, but would not be admitted to IRO refugee camps or be transported to asylum overseas with IRO funds.

The IRO was always intended to be a temporary organization to deal with a special postwar problem, and the council's action was largely based on a desire to check the influx of refugees to permit the IRO to be wound up by the summer of 1951.

The great majority of the 10,000 refugees came from Czechoslovakia and from former Italian areas ceded to Yugoslavia under the Italian peace treaty, the officials said.

"There are very few people coming out of the other satellite countries any more," one official declared.

More Funds Sought

It was expected that the IRO would soon ask its member governments—which include none of the East European Communist regimes—to reverse last year's decision of the General Council not to aid "new" refugees.

The officials said that if the United States Congress approved the second displaced persons act at present in the committee stage, most of the new refugees would be entitled to enter the United States as immigrants.

But a United States entry visa would be meaningless to them, the officials added, if the IRO were not authorized to provide the funds for their transportation to the United States.

S. Z. Ginsmurg Replaced In Soviet Ministry

London, May 29 (U.P.).—S. Z. Ginsburg has been "released" from his duties as Soviet Minister of the Building Materials Industry, Moscow Radio said in a broadcast tonight.

Ginsburg was replaced by P. A. Yudin, who had been Minister for the Construction of Heavy Industry Enterprises. D. Y. Raizer has taken over Yudin's former ministry, Moscow said. Nothing was said about what had happened to Ginsburg.

Flier Accused Of Sabotage To Airliner

Montreal, May 29 (A.P.).—An American pilot was arrested here today and charged with sabotaging an airliner about to leave for Rome with 52 holy year pilgrims.

The pilot, James Henry Vinson, whoe address was given only as Florida, was accused of releasing the airbrake pressure just before takeoff time yesterday.

There was no danger to the passengers and the plane left Montreal on schedule. While the pressure was released the plane could not take off.

Defense Attorney Joseph Cohen said Vinson acted on orders of Ocean Air Trade Ways of Wildwood, N. J., which, he said, owns the plane.

The charge was made by Curtiss-Reid Flying Service, Ltd., which claim it bought the plane from Ocean Air Trade Ways.

Cohen said the law requires that the brake pressure be released every six months to check the brake system.

He said Ocean Air Trade Ways had chartered the plane to Curtiss-Reid, but that the charter ran out May 20 and was not renewed.

Reds Curbed At Tokyo Rites For U. S. Dead

Tokyo (Tuesday), May 30 (U.P.).—Japanese police, directed by American MPs, threw up tight lines and kept Japanese Communists from staging a mass demonstration in central Tokyo this morning in competition with U. S. Army Memorial Day services held at the same hour.

All Japanese were barred from the Imperial Palace Plaza, where Communists had vowed to stage a rally of some 100,000 followers despite a ban by Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

Japanese who showed up for the rally at 9 a. m. carrying red flags and propaganda placards were turned back without violence. Police had posted signs at all entrances to the Plaza, saying "General Public Not Admitted Until 1 P. M."

MacArthur had forbidden the rally on the ground it would conflict with the Memorial Day ceremony, set for the same hour—9 a. m. (7 p. m. Monday, EDT)—at the same plaza.

The memorial services were held without interference, with some 8000 Americans attending the one-hour program.

Would-be demonstrators argued with police behind the lines but they quickly retreated and no trouble was reported. Police flying squads stood by during the American ceremony with their American pistols and nightsticks in readiness.

Police lines were withdrawn after the ceremony, and the signs forbidding entrance to Japanese taken down.

Sponsors of the rally immediately led a group of four or five thousand demonstrators to the stand prepared for their rally. The crowd listened to speeches and sang without incident.

The rally had been called by the Communists and affiliated leftists to commemorate the death of a worker during a previous demonstration against a bill restricting public rallies. They had refused to postpone it despite MacArthur's ban.

Nationalist China Voted Entry to UNESCO Session

Florence, Italy, May 29 (U.P.).—The credentials committee of the U. N. Education, Scientific and Cultural Organization voted tonight to admit Nationalist China's delegates to the UNESCO Conference here.

The vote was 6 to 2, with one abstention. A conference plenary session will vote Tuesday on the committee's recommendation.

Czechoslovakia and Hungary walked out of the conference last week in protest against the presence of the five-man Nationalist delegation. They threatened to quit UNESCO altogether if the Chinese were seated.

Yugoslavia and India voted against admitting the Nationalists and Britain abstained. The United States, France, Lebanon, Cuba, Canada and Brazil were in favor of the move.

District Holy Year Pilgrims Guests of Bavarian Farmers

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, public relations assistant at the Hamilton National Bank, is hostess for more than 200 Washingtonians now touring Europe following their Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome. From time to time she is reporting to The Washington Post. In the following letter she writes of visiting Munich, Germany.

Wiesbaden, Germany, Thursday, May 25.

Dear Reader:

Washington's Holy Year Pilgrims touring Europe stopped off briefly here on the way to Paris. It offered me an opportunity of telling our friends back home of our visit to Munich.

We arrived in Munich from Oberammergau about noon on Tuesday, May 23. Immediately I was struck with amazement that the citizens seemingly carry on a normal life amid so much devastation.

We were told that 40 percent of the buildings were destroyed by bombs and it is evident on every block of the downtown district.

Our hotel, the Regina Palast, the most beautiful in Munich before the war, was three-quarters bombed out. A small section has been restored and is in use. The rest remains to be rebuilt. The waiters are in tails and the food and service are so perfect you forget that on leaving the dining room you must step over debris.

We went sightseeing on Wednesday. Visited beautiful Nymphenburg Palace, which is slightly reminiscent of Versailles.

There are few places to visit because of the destruction. All you can do is ride by and look at exteriors. We took in the German Handicraft Fair and saw many unusual exhibits.

That night members of the Washington pilgrimage were guests of the Bavarian Bauernverbund (The Farmers Association of Bavaria) at an affair in the Hofbrauhaus honoring a group of distinguished Americans who are touring the area as guests of the Office of Land Commissions of Bavaria.

Studying Agriculture

The group, which is studying the agriculture program here, includes: Allen B. Kline, chief of the Farm Bureau; Dr. W. H. Dankers, chief of the Food and Agriculture Bureau; James Patton, National Grange; Jess Sanders, National Grange; Charles Ogg, Farm Bureau; John Davis, executive of cooperatives.

The purpose of the gathering was to express appreciation for the help and encouragement the United States has given to Bavarian farmers.

There was a great feeling of comradeship and good-fellowship in the Bavarians' songs and toasts to the Americans. We responded in kind with "Carry Me Back to Ole' Virginny."

Bouquets Presented

Each lady in the Washington group was presented a bouquet of lilies-of-the-valley. Among those present were Edna Rosenberger, Clare Shumate, Frances Lavender, Lillian Werden, Dorothy Ryan, Evelyn Harkins, Theresa Kennedy, Father Joseph Denges, John Palmer and Michael Halloren.

Capping the evening was the unexpected pleasure of meeting Sister Kenny, famous for her treatment of polio, who came in for a while.

This leter is necessarily brief for we must be leaving Wiesbaden immediately. So goodby until we reach Paris. KATHRYN.

$100,000 Job Set For MacArthur, Magazine Says

New York, May 29 (U.P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur has agreed to accept a $100,000-a-year position with Remington Rand, Inc., when he leave the Army, Cosmopolitan Magazine reported today.

In an exclusive statement the 70-year-old general said pressure of his duties in Japan and the "increasing tension elsewhere in Asia" made it essential that he stay at his post.

"If I returned home even for a short few weeks, I believe word would spread throughout the Orient that the United States was abandoning the Pacific, that the setbacks in China were forcing us to pull back," MacArthur told the magazine interviewer.

Nun Drowns in Hudson

Peekskill, N. Y., May 29 (U.P.).—Sister Marie Vernard, 50-year-old nun at St. Joseph's Home for Boys and Girls, drowned yesterday in the Hudson River. Police said she had been reading beside the river and apparently fainted and fell in.

Sen. McMahon Finds H-Bomb Held Feasible

By the United Press

Chairman Brien McMahon (D., Conn.) of the Joint Congressional Atomic Energy Committee, said yesterday that top experts think the hydrogen bomb is possible. But he warned bluntly that it is not a cold war cure-all.

He said there is strong danger the atomic arms race between the United States and Russia may spill over into actual war or force this country to adopt the totalitarian methods it now is fighting on a global basis.

He made those statements in a copyrighted interview with U. S. News & World Report, an independent news magazine. He refused to say whether he thinks Russia has an atomic lead but added flatly that the United States is spending too little on atomic energy.

But he put in a strong new plug for his plan for checking the cold war by offering to cut U. S. arms spending two-thirds and making 50 billion dollars available to the United Nations to help rebuild both Communist and anti-Communist nations.

McMahon said that, while the worst effect of the cold war to date has been to stifle freedom of action and information in this country, there is always the danger some East-West spark will set off an explosion.

On the other hand, he added, an end to the cold war means 50 years of unparalleled progress for everyone.

"Always in history, armaments races have led to war," he said. "Wherever you have had two contending powers, whether Athens and Sparta or any other period of history, it ends in war. And today's struggle, I fear, would be no exception."

He also said that:

1. Despite doubts by some scientists, most of the experts working on the hydrogen bomb believe it is feasible. He said he gained that impression during a recent month-long tour of atomic installations and talks with top scientists.

2. The United States has done "rather a poor job" of influencing world opinion, while Communist propaganda has been dangerously effective. Free men, he said, must be imbued with a passionate conviction that the things they are fighting for are right.

McMahon said it would be "intolerable" for the East-West deadlock to continue indefinitely because it will lead to stricter and stricter government controls over the American way of life.

"It's trite but it's true that we can hardly prepare for and fight a full-scale atomic war and still keep our freedoms as we know them today," he said. "I just don't think it is in the cards."

Kitten Saved From Well By One That Knows How

Dublin, Ireland, May 29 (U.P.)—When a kitten fell into a narrow dry well 40 feet down, none of the bystanders could descend to get him out. The mother cat was lowered on a rope and then raised to the surface—with the kitten grasped firmly in her mouth.

Trade Loss Laid to Cold War

Geneva, Switzerland, May 29 (U.P.).—Gunnar Myrdal, executive secretary of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe, said tonight that increased military expenditure due to the cold war threatens to impede the economic recovery of all European countries.

One of the penalties of the cold war, Myrdal said, is the growing burden of military spending, "which threatens to stifle again as it has so often in the past the chances of economic progress in both the East and West by diverting resources to the manufacture of armaments and the maintenance of military forces."

Another penalty of the cold war, Myrdal said, is "the virtual stalemate in economic relations between eastern and western Europe."

Myrdal made his comments in a preface to the annual survey of his commission. He recently visited Moscow and other capitals in an attempt to stimulate trade between western and eastern European countries.

Greatest menace to continued economic stability and growth in western Europe lies in the unsolved overseas payments problem, Myrdal said. The prospective inability of Europe to earn dollars after American aid ceases in 1952 is a world problem rather than one merely between Europe and the United States, he said.

Unless the necessary adjustments are undertaken promptly, he added, "the sudden curtailment of imports from the United States two or three years hence could produce a serious dislocation in production and consumption and impede Europe's possibilities of economic growth over a longer period."

Myrdal disclosed that his commission is now receiving so little statistical information from eastern European countries that his commission's survey cannot give a balanced picture of eastern and western Europe.

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. 3-Nation Spy Drive Forecast in Canada

Ottawa, May 29 (AP).—The Canadian Press today said there are signs that a full-scale British-Canadian-American offensive against Communist spies may break wide open at any time.

One of the signs was seen in London reports that a Canadian is among suspects in an international atomic spy ring linked with the German-born scientist, Dr. Klaus Fuchs.

The fact that officials are so firm in their determination not to talk leads to the belief that Canada soon may see a revival of the sensational spy trials of 1946, the news service said.

Two London newspapers said yesterday that more than a dozen atomic scientists, government officials and businessmen are likely to be arrested soon and charged with passing secret information to Russia. They include a Briton, at least one Canadian and six Americans, one paper said.

In a notebook seized at the time of the 1946 trials was found the name of Fuchs, now serving 14 years in prison for giving secrets to Russia.

Fuchs' name carried no significance in 1946; now it does.

Since Fuchs has been under questioning by United States Federal Bureau of Investigation men, Harry Gold, Philadelphia research chemist, has been arrested. The FBI said Gold admitted having dealings with Fuchs.

London's Sunday weekly, Reynolds News, said the expected arrest of the Canadian and other members of the alleged ring will be a direct result of the questioning of Fuchs. It said Fuchs had given the names of 200 suspects.

The Sunday Empire News said for the past 10 days Fuchs had been identifying "suspect after suspect" from films flown to London, and that arrests are certain to follow.

Of an already formidable list of suspects compiled by British, American and Canadian authorities, 1000 are Americans, 150 Canadians and 100 British, Reynolds News said.

Officials here declined comment on the London reports, which were not confirmed officially in London.

But the iron-bound reticence and other hints indicated that behind the scenes the Canadian Royal mounted police are cooperating closely with Scotland Yard and the FBI to exploit the Fuchs and Gold arrests into one of the biggest international spy round-ups yet, the Canadian Press said.

White House 'Confidential' Talk

Harris & Ewing

for Moscow. The United States will vote against seating the Chinese Communists, but will not use its veto to prevent a majority of the Security Council from doing so.

Since leaving Moscow, Lie has talked cryptically of a change for the better within two or three months. But he has given no public evidence to justify such a hope, and he apparently got not the slightest encouragement of a change in the American position on China in the U. N.

Several weeks ago Lie proposed calling periodic special meetings of the Security Council, to be attended by the Foreign Ministers of the member nations.

American officials still believe this is an academic question, since the Soviet Union refuses to sit in the Security Council as long as Nationalist China is represented. They feel Lie's idea may be valuable some day, but only after the Russians end their walkouts and take their place once more in U. N. discussions.

Lie had an hour and 10 minutes with Acheson yesterday morning, reviewing the talks he had and the impressions he obtained on his European journey.

Acheson then went to the White House to report on his own meetings in Paris and London, and to outline to the President the report he plans to make to members of Congress on Wednesday.

Lie joined Acheson for a 25-minute talk with the President, accompanied by Byron Price, assistant secretary general of the U. N.

After the meeting the President went off for a holiday cruise down the Potomac; Acheson went to Capitol Hill for lunch with Chairman Tom Connally (D., Tex.) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and John Kee (D., W. Va.) of the House Foreign Affairs Committee. Accompanying the Secretary were Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup and former Senator John S. Cooper of Kentucky, now a Republican consultant at the State Department.

This was Acheson's first chance to tell the congressional leaders about the London meetings. He volunteered no details about the meetings with Lie; he did say, however, that the West must rely for security more on its own increasing economic and military strength than upon any dramatic new peace overture to Russia.

Acheson praised the Schuman proposal for the pooling of French and German industries, although he said the plan would require much additional study. He told of improved morale in western Europe, and assured the congressional leaders that there would be no delay in pushing ahead with joint military planning in the North Atlantic area.

He plans to elaborate on this story in his unprecedented appearance before members of both houses Wednesday in the auditorium of the Library of Congress. Members will be invited to ask questions, but questions and answers will be "on the record," according to present plans.

The Secretary will make another congressional appearance Friday morning, when he appears before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and the Armed Services Committee to ask a second year's authorization for the military assistance program.

The present plan is to ask for about a billion dollars for western Europe—the same as this year's amount—plus about a quarter of a billion for other countries. Defense Secretary Louis Johnson and the Chief of Staff, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, plan to appear before the Senate committee on this subject Monday.

Lie Plans to Continue His 'Save U. N.' Drive

Lake Success, May 29 (AP).—Secretary General Trygve Lie's "Save-the-United-Nations" campaign will continue, informed quarters said today after Lie's talks with President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson in Washington.

These quarters said the secretary general is satisfied with the Washington conversations and that he feels the possibilities for East-West negotiations still exist.

"The ball is still in play," this informant said. "The game is still on."

GOP Concedes Okay by House In RFC Shift

Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R., Mich.), a chief foe of President Truman's reorganization plans, yesterday conceded there is little chance the House will veto any of the President's four new proposals.

Ranking GOP member of the House Expenditures Committee, which handles the plans, Hoffman said members "haven't the courage or inclination" to kill the latest proposals.

"They're too busy trying to get elected," he said.

The four proposals become effective automatically in July unless killed by majority vote in either the House or Senate.

Mr. Truman has sent 25 reorganization plans to Congress this year. Out of his first batch of 21, the Senate killed five and the other 16 went into effect last week.

Hoffman asserts all of them are part of a scheme to set up "little political dictatorships" under the guise of adoting economies recommended by the Hoover Comission.

"The smart politicans on both sides have fallen into a trap," he said. "The Republicans must have thought there would be a Republican President when they gave so much power (to reorganize)."

The new plans would:

1. Shift the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to the Commerce Department.

2. Strengthen the power of the chairman of the National Security Resources Board.

3. Shift the RFC's Federal National Mortgage Association to the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

4. Transfer other RFC home-loan agencies to the same agency.

3 Escapees Get 75-Year Totals For Crime Spree

Abingdon, Va., May 29 (AP).—Sentences aggregating 75 years in prison were levied today by Judge Vincent L. Sexton against three prison escapees who went on a week-long crime spree and were indicted for felonies ranging from housebreaking to attempted murder.

George W. Able, Tyler Hodges, jr., and Amos Nuckolls each was sentenced to 30 years in prison for the robbery by force of Roscoe Mutter, Damascus Town policeman; 20 years for robbing Oakie McCourt at pistol point; 20 years for the armed robbery of Oakie Cougar, and five years for robbing the store of Dean Blevins in the Damascus, Va., region.

Judge Sexton ruled that the sentences of Able and Hodges should run consecutively.

The court showed leniency toward Nuckolls, 19, and held that his sentences should run concurrently.

Able, Hodges and Nuckolls escaped from prison camp in Halifax County, Va., on April 1.

Detroit's Dogs Listed in Secret File, Police Say

Detroit, May 29 (AP).—An advertising agency tried to get from police headquarters a list of Detroit dogs and their owners. It wanted to let the dogs in on a new dog food.

Police refused to give the information, claiming all dogs are listed in a secret file.

The agency, Maxon, Inc., complained today to City Council.

Council said it sounded like a legitimate howl and promised to investigate.

Session of Senate Lasts 15 Seconds

Yesterday's Senate session lasted 15 seconds. Even the customary opening prayer was dispensed with.

Senator Hayden (D., Ariz.) declared the Senate recessed until noon Wednesday after reading an agreement entered into last Friday that no business would be transacted during the Memorial Day holiday.

The House is in a 10-day recess.

Fresh Cabbage Juice Suggested For Peptic Ulcers

Washington, May 30. — The above heading appeared in an (AP) newspaper article which reads as follows: A remarkable speedup in the healing of peptic ulcers when treated with new cabbage juice was reported today by a California scientist.

In the first test of its kind on human beings, 31 patients, some with ulcers of long standing, received the cabbage juice treatment. Each drank about a quart of juice daily. In 11 cases the ulcers disappeared in six to nine days, said the scientist. He reported the tests in California Medicine, an official journal. One case required 23 days of treatment.

The tests indicate, but do not prove, the scientist said, that raw cabbage juice contains an unidentified substance which plays "a specific role in the healing of peptic ulcers."

Pure fresh cabbage juice and other fresh vegetable juices may be had in Washington from the Vita Food Co., at 3040 14th st. nw., or at the C & O Food Store, 519 11th st. nw., CO. 2980.

One on the Aisle—

From 'The Avenue' To the Haymarket

By Richard L. Coe

MAINLY ABOUT PEOPLE: Phil Hanna and James Jamieson of "Brigadoon" will have the unusual experience this afternoon of sitting in Pennsylvania ave. and playing to an audience in His Majesty's Theater on London's Haymarket . . . Both had their current Gayety roles in the original British production, which, come 6 o'clock will be ending its 500th performance in London . . . For the West End audience Hanna will sing "Almost Like Being in Love" and Jamieson will say that telling line of his which ends the first act . . . The phone company's been working overtime putting special lines into Phil's Raleigh suite so the boys can be piped into their old habitat . . . London will send greetings back.

RICHARD SKINNER, the Olney's coproducer due in town tomorrow, may be seen eating his words . . . In the current Theater Arts Dick has a piece about selecting plays for summer theater. He writes: "The selection of plays for this Maryland audience varies considerably from what it would be for other locales. Such a play as 'Light Up the Sky,' with its local Broadway angle would have relatively little appeal in the South, despite the interest caused by it in New York." . . . So, along comes Dick with this announcement: "Light Up the Sky" will be the Olney's third offering of the summer, with Jean Parker as the star.

PAUL GREEN reports that prabably 60 percent of the people who auditioned for his Sesqui drama, "Faith of Our Fathers," over the weekend are likely to be chosen . . . The "more mature" actors arrived Saturday as requested . . . About the middle of June final selections will be made, with rehearsals getting under way right after . . . Opening date of the new open air theater is still unsettled, thanks to the same kind of weather, rainy days being bum for pouring concrete.

WHAT ARE Gertrude Lawrence, Francesca Lodge and Fleur Cowles cooking up? . . . The star and wife of Producer Richard Aldrich, the wife of Representative John Davis Lodge and the publisher of fascinatin' "Flair" have a Boston date June 18 . . . Miss Lawrence, by the way, is getting raves akin to Gloria Swanson in "Sunset Boulevard," for her Amanda in the screen version of "The Glass Menagerie" . . . Gertie will play her husband's summer theater on the Cape in "Traveller's Joy," a London 3-year-old in which the original star, Yvonne Arnaud, should play America.

KYRA PETROVSKAYA, as lovely a blonde as ever paid this desk a visit, joins WOIC's new Wednesday half-hour, "The Little Pop" . . . Kyra, a miniature pup lover, was a prewar Moscow actress, daughter of a prince executed during the Revolution . . . She married an American, the former Red Cross mission chief in USSR and is now a Washington housewife who thinks a weekly half-hour of her old career will be fun.

ANGIE RATTO, the Palace manager, gets back next week after a trip to Rome which included a private audience with the Pope. . . . He's traveling with Father Nicholas De Carlo of the Holy Rosary Church, which will give a reception for them on their return.

FRANCIS COMPTON, whose portraits of wily old men have brightened "Red Gloves," "Idiot's Delight" and "Kind Lady" draws the Caesar role opposite Paulette Goddard in "Caesar and Cleopatra," opening attraction at Olney. . . . He played the part opposite Helen Hayes in her Suffern revival of the comedy before the war. . . . Another set for the cast is Hurd Hatfield, of the movies "A Portrait of Dorian Gray."

HERB FEDDER, a Washingtonian once of show business, has a happy reunion scheduled today. . . . For the first time in years his three children, all now in the show world, will get together; Daughter Janie Lynn, who's sung in a half dozen of the town's supper rooms, Son Jack Fedder of Hollywood's TV set, and Son Tobe T. Fedder, now with the Neighborhood Playhouse, will all be on tap, representing, incidentally, Navy, Marines and Air Force vets.

THE JERVIS FAMILY of Falls Church and Joel Rogosin, their neighbor, are making big headway on their puppet troupe . . . Mother Ida first consults with Son Nelson, then takes care of script, puppets and scenery . . . Dad Sidney operates as engineer and set carpenter and Neighbor Rogosin joins with the strings and plays such roles as Casper Picklenose, the stooge of title character Happy Joe . . . Formed three years ago the company's been on school and organizational benefit shows as well as WTTG's "Moppet Shop" . . . Next date on the busy Jervis calender is Saturday at the Arlington-Fairfax Hadassah's annual Children's Fair to be held at Burstein's Farm, 3 miles west of that Falls Church traffic light on the Leesburg Pike . . . Mrs. J. can tell you more about her puppets at JEfferson 3-9099.

GLORIA JEAN tonight becomes the first star for the new Collingwood Theater at the restaurant 5 miles south of Alexandria on the Mount Vernon hwy. . . . The play is Preston Sturges' "Strictly Dishonorable," with company's leading man, Lee Bergere, as the wolfish opera singer Ezio Pinza will shortly portray in a Merto movie.

You can still get tickets for The Post's National Celebrities Golf Tournament and the Bob Hope Show. Don't delay, get yours today.

Gamblers Flee, Burn Records

on Erickson Hogan is presenting to the grand jury in New York. Kefauver said the New York records seized showed Erickson owned an interest in Green Acres, once known as Colonial Inn.

Hogan had seized Erickson records showing that the owners of Colonial Inn, including Erickson, had paid some $40,000 to "charities," perhaps a cover for a protection payoff. The Senators are known to have gone into that angle.

Florida, California Linked

Kefauver said the names of Frank Costello and Joe Adonis, who with Erickson make up the Big Three of gambling, also figured in the Miami probe. And he said there were links between Florida and California.

But as to whether the committee will go next to California or Louisiana (the Senator mentioned New Orleans), Kefauver was purposely vague. And in reply to a question, he said the committee also will look into conditions in Kansas City "to the extent we feel the situation justifies it."

The reports on departures of gamblers from Miami, their usual winter haunts, for foreign parts served to reinforce the committee intention to go to Florida. Kefauver has made it clear he would depend heavily on the work of the various crime commissions around the country and the Miami commission has been among the most active. Its boss has been working quietly with Kefauver for several months.

Coast Visit Likely

Because the California Crime Commission likewise has been very active, a visit to the West Coast is a good possibility for the committee. Besides, the committee's chief investigator, Harold G. Robinson, until recently served in the same capacity with the California group.

Kefauver said he left six investigators in Florida to continue the job there. Most of them are former FBI agents hired on a day-to-day basis, he indicated.

The Senator also said the committee may hold public hearings in Washington in about three weeks. But they would have Government officials, not gamblers, as witnesses. The idea would be to further explore the need for Federal legislation in the gambling field.

Jap Children Offer Cherry Trees for U. N. Headquarters

New York, May 29 (AP).—The children of Japan would like to send 3000 cherry trees to be planted at the new United Nations headquarters in New York, Yukio Ozaki, the veteran Japanese Diet member, told U. N. officials today.

The 91-year-old legislator said he had been "commissioned" by the children of Japan to make the offer. As mayor of Tokyo, Ozaki presented cherry trees to Washington, D. C., as a mark of gratitude to President Theodore Roosevelt for his part in settling the Russo-Japanese War.

Andrew Cordier, executive assistant to U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie, said he would take the offer up with the U. N. trustees.

Ozaki will leave for Washington Wednesday, where he hopes to meet President Truman and sit in on Congress sessions.

Racket Rights Shared, Miami Paper States

Miami, Fla., May 29 (AP).—The Miami Daily News today said Miami Beach winter secret sessions of big shots in the national crime syndicate came under scrutiny of Senator Kefauver's investigating committee.

The Democratic Senator from Tennessee held secret hearings here Friday and Saturday. With him were Senator Hunt (D., Wyo.) and Rudolph Halley, counsel for the five-member Senate committee charged with probing gambling, political bribery and crime syndicates.

The newspaper said "one of the key witnesses . . . was asked whether he secreted Frank Erickson in certain Miami Beach hotels during his winter visits and whether he knew of the conferences between Erickson, Frank Costello, Joe Adonis and Tony Accardo.

"Costello meets annually at Miami Beach with others of the Nation's top racket figures to split up concessions in cities across the country," the paper said.

There was no indication what the witness replied and he was not further indentified.

However, Senator Hunt said in Washington yesterday, shortly after the investigators returned from Miami, that "we obtained information which definitely ties up with some of the higher-ups both on the Pacific Coast and in New York."

Taciturn Farmer Is Released

Harrisonburg, Va., May 29 (AP).—Tight-lipped Robert G. Phillips still isn't talking—but he's out of jail.

The 65-year-old Rockingham County farmer spent 25 days in confinement because he wouldn't open either his mouth or his pocketbook. What's more, it was this third stay in jail in two years.

It began in 1948 when he built a dam. A neighbor, Alvin R. Kerns, charged Phillips was diverting a stream away from Kerns' property. He got an injunction to make Phillips stop impeding the stream's flow.

Convicted of violating the injunction, Phillips was sentenced to five days in jail—which he served. It wasn't long before he was convicted of contempt of court for continuing to violate the injunction. This time he had to spend 10 days in jail.

Recently, Phillips sold his farm. Kerns secured a judgment for damages of $775 he said resulted from the stream's diversion. And Phillips was back in court again.

Phillips got his choice of paying the judgment or telling where he had deposited $9000 he received for the sale of the property so it could be levied against to satisfy the judgment.

Phillips declined politely to do either. So he was ordered to jail to think it over.

The farmer still hasn't answered any questions—but the judge received a motion Saturday night from Kerns that Phillips be released. He was. But nobody knows why.

Phillips, it seems, still is being close-mouthed.

27-Ounce Infant Leaves Hospital After 5½ Months

New York, May 29 (NYHT).—Prematurely born last December 17, weighing only 27 ounces, Dennis McKenna left Adelphi Hospital, Brooklyn, today after five and one half months of care, weighing 6½ pounds, and healthy.

The baby left in the arms of his mother, Mrs. Francis McKenna, 24, wife of an automobile salesman.

There was a little ceremony at the hospital when young Dennis, called "the miracle baby," or "the prince" by the nurses during the past few months was placed in his mother's arms. Instead of presenting the father with a bill, Herman Hoffman, president of the hospital, handed him a United States Savings Bond for $25.

Mrs. McKenna wept when she received her child. "Its the first time I've ever touched him," she said. "I'm a little scared."

Indo-China Guerillas Lose Red River Area

Hanoi, Indo-China, May 29 (AP)—A French general said today that rebel guerilla forces have been driven from the entire Rer River delta area of northern Indo-China.

Maj. Gen. Marcel Jean-Marie Allessandri, commanding officer in the area, told the French Press Agency about 2100 square miles with a population of 3,000,000 have been reoccupied by French and Viet Names troops since October.

Tub Willed to Plumber

Sidcup, England, May 29 (U.P.)—The will of Mrs. Annie Skinner, a widow, published today, left her bathtub and hand basin to plumber Norman Butler. "He has given them every attention for 25 years without any payment from me," Mrs. Skinner said.

Business Wins Tax Privilege

1949, could apply $100,000 of the current year's loss against last year's profits, and thus offset its tax liability.

Continue For 5 Years

The remaining $50,000 loss on this year's operations could similarly be used to offset taxes in subsequent years of profit, through 1955.

In recommending the change, Treasury Secretary Snyder told the committee:

"Taxing profits without adequate recognition of losses creates inequities and restrains risk-taking. A dynamic economy requires a continued stream of new ventures, which often result in losses for a series of years before they become profitably established."

The committee meanwhile turned attention to President Truman's call for a 4 percent set-up in the 38 percent corporation tax rate to raise 675 million dollars, but postponed a vote until Thursday.

Offsetting Revenue Sought

Having slashed excise levies by $1,080,000,000, the House taxmakers are still seeking revenue to offset the loss, but nearly all of the Republicans and some of the Democrats shy at new imposts on business.

To effect at least a paper balance the committee may swing this week to a plan advanced by Representative Wilbur D. Mills (D., Ark.), for advancing six months the date of corporate tax payments.

Mills, backed by Treasury Secretary Snyder, offered the plan as a "tax reform" rather than a revenue raiser, but estimated his original proposal would net 4.8 billion dollars this year. It would be strictly a 1950 windfall, however, and not permanent revenue.

If the committee decides to increase corporate tax rates, Mills has indicated, he will present a modified plan to lessen its possible impact on business. The revised Mills plan, said to yield about one billion dollars, would gradually advance the date of corporate tax payments.

Tongue in Light Socket Electrocutes Boy, 3

Philadelphia, May 29 (AP).—A 3-year-old boy put his tongue into an electric light socket and was electrocuted last night, police said today.

The child, Francis Ritch, was found in the cellar of his home with his tongue in the outlet of a plugged-in extension cord.

Montgomery Council Holds Quiet Session

A legislative session of the Montgomery County Council in Rockville last night attracted three newspaper reporters and no one else.

Scheduled business was public hearings on about 10 bills before the council which had not received prior airing.

Seven councilmen, headed by President Frederic P. Lee, spent their pre-holiday evening reading letters from citizens on various pieces of legislation.

The council will meet in legislative session again today at 2 p. m. in the courthouse at Rockville. According to the Maryland constitution, laws can be passed only in May in charter counties.

Lee pointed out that public hearing had been held for most of the controversial bill of this year's session.

Prior to the meeting, Einar Christensen, president of the Silver Spring Board of Trade, phoned the council that the board's executive committee opposed levying a business tax on personal property in the Silver Spring business section.

Most of the mail dealt with the hospital bill hearing of last week. The Capitol View Park Citizens, however, went on record opposing the construction of a $1,300,000 county building in Rockville, saying that the offices could better be decentralized to Bethesda and Silver Spring where buildings already exist for that purpose.

Library Appoints Conrad P. Aiken Poetry Consultant

Appointment of Conrad Potter Aiken, poet, novelist, and short story writer, as consultant in poetry and English at the Library of Congress for 1950-51 was announced yesterday.

Aiken, who has been a fellow of the Library of Congress in American Letters since 1947, will take over his duties in September.

Aiken is the author of 30 books, varying from poetry to novel and short story. In 1929 his "Selected Poems" received both the Pulitzer Prize and the Shelley Memorial Award.

House Pays Tribute To Lesinski's Memory

The House held a 55-minute session yesterday devoted to eulogies of the late Representative John Lesinski (D., Mich.) and then adjourned out of respect for his memory.

Democratic Leader John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, praised Lesinski as a man of "forthright courage" in his position as chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee.

Representative Tom Steed (D., Okla.), a member of the committee, said Lesinski was a "man who never held a personal grudge."

Republican Whip Leslie C. Arends (Ill.), and Representative Earl C. Michener (R., Mich.) joined the Democrats in eulogizing Lesinski, who died at home Saturday.

they must be studied by the full NCPPC, detailed plans drawn and finally put to public hearings, after which the commissioners must issue their verdict.

NCPPC is still staggering from its three-year losing bout with Congress and local residents, where it failed to sell its first slum-clearance planning job—Marshall Heights in Southeast Washington.

It was the demise of the Marshall Heights project, vigorously opposed by some House members, that finally prompted the commissioners to turn to HHFA for its aid.

In its announcement yesterday, HHFA pointed out its reservation of funds for the District "will stand for six months, or longer, if specific steps are taken looking toward initiation of specific projects."

The District reservation was the 104th approved by HHFA.

Heart Failure Caused Davis' Death in Jail, Coroner Rules

touch with Fay and with Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, and expected to receive Fay's decision Wednesday.

Fay said he received "a copy of this (report) from Dr. MacDonald and I want to have a chance to study it to see what action, if any, is warranted."

An FBI investigation of the Davis death also has been completed.

The Department of Justice's Criminal Division is studying the FBI reports to see if Davis' civil liberties were violated. A spokesmen said its "inquiry" has not been concluded.

Dr. MacDonald's report tells how an initial autopsy was performed by Deputy Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy the day after Davis died.

"No marks of violence were found at that time and a temporary certificate was issued until such time as a chemical analysis could be made."

The chemical analysis was needed, he said, because of the sedative administered to Davis in the cell block. Davis at this point "became quiet," Dr. MacDonald said, "and in spite of artificial respiration and other measures, he failed to respond and was pronounced dead at 10:07 p. m."

Kirkpatrick's report tells how Davis became wild in his cell: "Inmate Davis had been causing a lot of disturbance."

But in this first report Kirkpatrick made no mention of the towel. The guard said a Gallinger Hospital intern was called.

When the door to Davis' cell was opened, Kirkpatrick stated, "Davis walked out . . . in a quiet manner and all at once pushed me against the bars, cutting my shoulder and started running up the range (jail cell corridor).

"I caught him at about middle way . . . and we both started to struggle and fell to the floor, hitting my shoulder and back against the bars."

Two other guards were called, Kirkpatrick's report continues, and "the three of us were holding inmate Davis for (the) intern to administer a sedative, when the inmate collapsed."

But in the second, supplementary report, Kirkpatrick said: "When he and I fell to the floor, he attempted to bite me several times and also hit his head on the floor.

"I happened to see an inmate nearby with a towel on his shoulders and asked him for the towel in order to hold the man's head up and to keep him from biting my hand.

"Even with the towel as a restraint, it was impossible to keep him quiet and he talked and kept on struggling. The towel was around his neck just a minute or so, and wasn't held tight during all of that time."

Concerning the chemical tests for the sedative, Dr. MacDonald reported that a District chemist was unable to find any sedative in the blood of the dead man, although an investigation disclosed that about a grain and a half of sodium amytal (a common drug) was administered.

A second examination of Davis' body was made on May 7 at Fayettsville, N. C., where the body was taken for burial. There were no signs of broken flesh about the neck; no indications of asphyxiation, the report says.

Dr. Murphy, after performing a second autopsy at Fayettsville came back to Washington with vital organs for macroscopic (low magnification) and microscopic (high magnification) tests.

Clemmer said that unless United States Attorney Fay refers the case to the grand jury, Kirkpatrick "will be returned to duty immediately. He has already been on 19 days of enforced leave. . . ."

Also ignored were incest charges placed against Lawrence T. Tinsman, 38, of 1332 Harvard st. nw., and his daughter, Betty Jean Tinsman, 18, of 1136 21st st. nw.

"How living are the dead!"

Florence Earle Coates
(1850-1927)

On this Memorial Day commemorating the supreme sacrifice countless thousands of Americans have paid that this country and its principles might live, it is altogether fitting and proper that we who have survived them should ask ourselves—

"What are we, our country's living defenders, doing to perpetuate and safeguard those treasures for which they have died?"

Are we, the ones to whom they've entrusted the responsibility to protect and promote the ideals for which "they gave the last full measure of devotion," doing our own individual best to perpetuate "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness"?

The answer to this question is a personal one. Each of us, privileged to live according to his own conscience in these United States, must answer the question to the satisfaction of his own heart and soul.

When ECA Ends

In an address delivered last week before members of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, Secretary of Commerce Sawyer warned that the American people cannot give away dollars forever to bridge the dollar trade gap. When the Marshall Plan ends in 1952, he asked, "What shall we prepare to do to balance international accounts on a business basis?"

Americans are apt to forget that a solution of the problem of the dollar trade gap is their responsibility as well as that of aided nations. Secretary Sawyer's question is a timely reminder that we have as great a stake in bringing world trade into balance as have other countries. For by lending and giving away dollars we have provided the funds needed for the purchase of our own goods. Consequently the withdrawal of such assistance will create problems for this country that we dare not ignore. If our exports were suddenly cut off or drastically reduced in 1952, not only would the export trade suffer, but cutbacks in exports would, as Mr. Sawyer says, have "cumulative adverse effects on United States prices, production, employment and purchasing power."

To be sure, our 1949 exports amounted to less than 5 percent of the gross national product. However, it would be a serious mistake to minimize their importance. For a Department of Commerce analysis shows that last year more than 30 percent of the wheat, raw cotton, and machine tools produced in the United States was shipped abroad, and from 20 to 30 percent of the lard, leaf tobacco, turpentine, lubricating oil, and tractors. Exports of other commodities, such as condensed milk, soybeans and soybean oil, tin plate, rail and motor trucks amounted to between 10 and 20 percent of total production. Obviously sharp declines in the exports of these commodities would have seriously adverse effects on certain farm groups and industries and indirectly on business in general.

That being the case, self-interest requires that we make determined efforts not merely to balance our foreign trade when the aid program comes to an end, but to balance that trade at a level "which will not disrupt our domestic economy and which will make an effective contribution to the maintenance of economic stability throughout the world." At the request of President Truman, Gordon Gray, assisted by a small staff of experts, is now studying the problem of the dollar gap as the first step in laying the foundation for a consistent foreign economic policy which will prevent Government agencies from working at cross-purposes when the Marshall Plan ends. It is a good thing that persons of the position of Secretary Sawyer are giving him assistance on the public platform.

Racing Information

The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee obviously has profited from some second thoughts on its bill to prohibit the interstate transmission of gambling information. The bill reported out by the committee is a far better measure than that suggested by Attorney General McGrath. It remedies many of the defects pointed out by Chairman Coy of the Federal Communications Commission in that it provides a more precise definition of gambling information and does not leave policing to an administrative agency. The trouble still is, however, that until the Kefauver committee has completed its investigation of interstate crime, specific items of corrective legislation such as this must be considered more or less in the dark.

One major improvement is that the bill would place the onus on persons using communications facilities for illegal purposes, rather than primarily on the communications companies themselves. In other words, it would get at the senders as well as the carriers of gambling information. It would prohibit the use of telephone, telegraph and radio broadcasts to spread advance information about betting, scratches, jockey changes, weights, odds and the like with respect to horse and dog racing. Since such use of communications facilities would become a Federal crime, presumably enforcement would be in the hands of United States attorneys, though the bill also directs the FCC to insure enforcement of tariffs filed by communications companies. Recent testimony has indicated considerable looseness on this point; it is incredible, for example, that telegraph executives are unaware of the use of leased wires by bookmakers and other professional gamblers.

What is notably missing from the bill is a declaration of public policy. Before there can be a valid determination of such policy, it seems to us, legislators must know more about crime syndicates and how extensively they depend on telephone and telegraph facilities. Just what specific types of information help the criminals? Is it as important, say, to ban after-the-fact transmission of data on prices paid as to prohibit advance information on odds? If on the basis of documented facts legislators then find that it is in the public interest to restrict use of communications facilities, there can be no justifiable cry of censorship. What is imperative is that any corrective actually be enforceable, and not another fiasco of the prohibition variety. The Interstate Commerce Committee has made a well-intentioned stab at the problem, but such legislation will be a lot more solidly grounded when it has the results of the Kefauver investigation behind it.

Verdict Without Trial

Secretary of Commerce Sawyer's attempted ouster of two employes under fire involves a principle of vital importance. It is with the principle alone, rather than with the personalities of the two cases, that this newspaper is concerned. We believe that men accused of disloyalty are entitled to a fair hearing under the procedures of the President's loyalty program devised to deal with just such accusations. The effect of Secretary Sawyer's attempt to dismiss rather than to suspend William W. Remington and Michael E. Lee while their cases are pending is to undermine the whole loyalty program, and indeed, to threaten it with entire collapse.

Mr. Sawyer says that his action "is in no wise intended to reflect in any way on the loyalty of either of these two men" but was taken, rather, "in the interest of good administration in the department." This is simply glossing over a bad action. The action cannot fail to reflect on the loyalty of the men concerned, and, in the case of Mr. Remington, who has been called before a grand jury, it may have the most damaging results, for it amounts to nothing less than an assumption of guilt before there has even been an indictment. Mr. Sawyer well knows that grand juries are not impervious to the verdicts of Cabinet officers.

So far as "good administration in the department" is concerned, this can scarcely be advanced by a yielding to pressure from Capitol Hill. Quite the contrary, as subsequent developments showed. Senator Malone said on a television program Saturday that the Secretary of Commerce acted because he was afraid, if he did not act, his department would be investigated. The following day, flushed with his success, Senator Malone called for a "good, old-fashioned house cleaning in the Commerce Department." He asserted that the Secretary's action showed the need for investigation of everyone connected with the Lee and Remington cases and added, with the logic that seems to be the fashion in such matters, "This should prove they're all in it together." Thus the Secretary has abdicated his responsibility as administrator, and employes of the Commerce Department are now on notice that Senator Malone is their boss.

This is the kind of intimidation we object to. The executive has now succumbed to it. It seems to be accepting any expression of no-confidence in the Loyalty Review Board that comes along from any individual Senator. The board was created by the President for a dual purpose: to protect the Government from untrustworthy employes and equally to protect loyal employes from unjust accusations. It cannot fulfill these functions if it is ignored by department heads, as Secretary Sawyer has ignored it, and if dismissal by denunciation is to be the rule.

The threatened breakdown points imperatively, we think, to the need for a commission on security—an impartial study by an unpartisan body of universally respected citizens to weigh the procedures for determining loyalty and to clarify the climate in which they are to operate. What Mr. Sawyer has done is to supply a telling argument for that commission, and the President by this time ought to realize it. Here is one of his own Cabinet members kicking in the teeth the procedure with which he says he is satisfied.

Jerusalem

The Israeli suggestion of a U. N.-imposed authority over the holy places in Palestine is a practicable solution of a problem that intimately concerns the people of three great religions: Christians, Moslems, and Jews. There are over 30 of these shrines. The three main ones, the Christian Holy Sepulchure, the Moslem Mosque of Omar and the Jewish Wailing Wall are all in Jordan-held Jerusalem. Two are in the New City, or Israel territory. Bethlehem, about 12 miles from Jerusalem, is in Jordan hands, but Nazareth is in Israel, being over a hundred miles from Jerusalem. It would be the task of a U. N. commissioner (with, presumably, a posse of guards) to look after these shrines—more or less as was done by the French custodian in the days of the Ottoman Empire.

The plan passed by the U. N. Assembly last December would have subjected the entire Jerusalem area and its environs to United Nations control. This was plainly unacceptable to both the de facto sharers of Jerusalem, Jordan and Israel. It was put through for a variety of different reasons which found the Soviet bloc, the Arab League (except for non-U. N. member Jordan) and strictly Catholic countries, in a weird combination. The Russian preference for secular as well as religious control was based upon the fact that the Russian Orthodox Church has by far the greatest interest in church property in the Holy City. Now the Russians seem to have changed their minds—perhaps because they think that is the best way to get other waverers to stick to the original internationalization position!

The Arab countries now have a reason in Jordan's challenge to the Arab League to block any settlement of the problem of Jerusalem. Jordan, however, is the main party at interest. And there is every sign that though she may have to stay formally irresolute, she would get accustomed to U. N. overseership, if there were no effort to extend that overseership and impose territorial sovereignty as well. The prestige of the United Nations has been gravely damaged in the Middle East, first by indecision and then by gesturing, and the new plan, if taken up and vigorously pursued, would help to restore it.

Freedom In India

The Supreme Court of India has upheld freedom of the press in a decision that may be as historic as Chief Justice Marshall's pronouncements in the early history of our own country. The new constitution of India provides that "all citizens shall have the right to freedom of speech and expression." True to the best judicial tradition, the Supreme Court has ruled that this guarantee may be invoked against the government by citizens appealing to the courts. "Criticism of government and exciting disaffection or bad feeling toward government," the majority opinion held, "cannot be regarded as justifying ground for restricting the freedom of expression and of the press . . . nothing less than endangering foundations of the state or threatening its overthrow could justify curtailment of the right of freedom of speech and expression."

As is often the case, the court's decree protects two papers that are probably obnoxious to a great majority of the people. One is a pro-Communist weekly banned by the Madras state government, and the other is an extremist Hindu weekly. In other words, the court has recognized, as does our Supreme Court, "freedom for the thought we hate." To have that principle established in the heart of Asia where suppression has been widespread is an event of great significance.

There has been a good deal of disappointment because the Indian Supreme Court did not invalidate the law permitting the government to hold a person for 12 months without charge, but the court has ruled that such persons may force the government to disclose the reason for their detention. The significant thing is that the court is interpreting the Indian constitution in a judicial atmosphere instead of merely falling in with executive and legislative policy. Apparently the judicial tradition that the British established in India has taken deep root. When the final separation of the British and Indian courts was effected a few months ago, the New Delhi government said that nothing had impressed the people of India more than the sense of independence and impartiality that had marked the decision of appeals from India by the Privy Council.

If the executive and legislative branches have the good judgment to respect this tradition now that it has been transferred to Indian courts, the chance for successful operation of popular government in India will be immeasurably strengthened.

Bright Young Men

Why no bright young men today like those of 1775? General Marshall asked at the recent ceremony attending publication of the Jefferson papers. The youthful circle of Jefferson, Hamilton, Madison, and Monroe were inspirers of the Declaration of Independence and leaders in the Revolutionary crisis and again in the launching of the new republic. The general wondered whether today's lack of a similar group of young men could be due to restrictive educational processes that "held back the talents of youth," so depriving the Nation of contributions that come "in the most virile period when the sap is running to the full."

General Marshall has raised a question that does not admit of an easy answer. As to education, the young founding fathers had this educational advantage—they pursued their intellectual curiosity with a single purpose free from the many demands and distractions that impinge on youth today. Nor did these bright young men have the competition from age that exists now. Life expectancy then was less than 50 years, now it is 68. Youth matured early then, today its adolescence is prolonged. Moreover, the Jefferson group lived in a young man's world; Lafayette was 19, Kosciusko 30 when they came to help the American colonies. Nor did Jefferson and his young associates have to contend with a congressional seniority system which gives the plums of power to those who are long in service and seldom daring in mind. Then in their day the country was new, free from traditions, patterns, molds.

But couldn't the real answer dwell in the mysterious incidence of genius? Shakespeare says that the occasion oft provides the man, and the founding fathers were the great products of great times, though others who follow Carlyle would say that there happened in those days to be great men who made those times.

ECCE HOMO: VERMONT

Hold still, my friend John Abbott,
I'll count the teeth in your name;
There's nothing soft about them
And little time can tame.

But speak to me, John Abbott;
I love to watch your face
Chop down the stubborn syllables,
Or wall the words that race

Has left in you, John Abbott;
I watch your cautious fields
Admit the pallid dogwood
When June to summer yields;

I know your house, John Abbott;
How very white and still
Are centuries in a sturdy frame
Upon a solemn hill!

Atomic Memorial Day

He was born almost yesterday.
And by all prophecy he would live the fullness of his days.
He was dreams, extravagant dreams.
Then he was through with dreams and grown tall with the years.

And by all prophecy he would grow taller.

But today he lies beneath the earth, mute and still.
You will find him at St. Lo or Bataan, Anzio or Iwo . . .
wherever they have fallen . . .
there he lies . . . he endowed by all prophecy.

Think what he might have been.

And think again. Who at this moment is first becoming a breath of life, will by all prophecy live some Memorial Day anon, or who will know the terrible bitter frost of the atomic age to rend his heart asunder and chill his soul forever?

And ponder well . . . I pray thee . . . these things.

"Tablet's" Charge

A letter signed by Mary Elizabeth Keller of Hilton, N. Y., which was printed in The Washington Post of May 21, has been brought to my attention.

This letter takes issue with certain allegations made by the Brooklyn Tablet of subversive activities in and out of Government circles. Miss Keller suggests that statements by the Tablet regarding United World Federalists might be the basis for testing the veracity of charges of this kind by the publication named.

Specifically, UWF is asked to answer whether Vito Marcantonio was a founder of the United World Federalists at the Asheville Conference in February 1947.

I am glad to address myself to this question, in my capacity as one of the founding members of the United World Federalists and a present vice president of that organization.

Vito Marcantonio was not a founder of the United World Federalists at the Asheville Conference in February 1947. He is not a member of UWF and has never been a member of UWF. His position, as I understand it, follows the Communist Party line, which is in sharp conflict with the policies of UWF. By way of emphasizing this point I should like herewith to offer to post a personal bond for $5000 to anyone who can substantiate the claim made by the Brooklyn Tablet that Marcantonio was a founder of the United World Federalists at Asheville in 1947. The only condition I attach to this offer is that any person taking me up on it also post a bond for the same amount, payable to General Marshall's American Red Cross.

Cause Of Delinquency

This is an answer to your correspondent of May 15, who thinks that parents are the greatest culprits in the matter of delinquency because they do not give religious instruction in the home.

I would ask this gentleman to walk the lanes of poverty in the slums of our cities, among the itinerant farmers, with the miners in their miserable shacks in the coal districts, on the thousands of "tobacco roads" of the South, and in the deeper South where there is an untold story of generations of filth, horror, ignorance and degradation.

Poverty due to unemployment and only a subsistence wage is the great cause of delinquency. We have a society that glorifies a production of material things beyond that of any previous civilization, and one that constantly thrusts before us glaring and blaring inducements to possess things of the latest value, a value that will change tomorrow. We have a society of enormous wealth, but which complacently announces that the unemployment of four or five million people will always be a normal expectation. But, "Thou shalt not covet," says the preacher.

What is to become of the children of these, "our brothers"? They will become the progenitors of an even larger generation of youth without hope, without security, potential inmates of our institutions.

Until society can find the means whereby every man has the opportunity to provide not only food and shelter for his family, but to educate his children, to develop their talents, and to have a modicum of privilege to things which only the rich seem to have, the worst cause of delinquency will not be eradicated.

Let's do the sensible thing about the Freedom Fair. Naturalized Citizens

The special conference on immigration and naturalization and related subjects in connection with the Fifth National Conference of Citizenship, which was held May 20 at the Statler Hotel, was given little publicity, although very important subjects on citizenship were discussed and acted upon, not only by national and State officials but also by delegates from different organizations.

A lively discussion followed the suggestion by Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, chief, passport division, Department of State, that the law is too harsh which provides that a naturalized American citizen cannot remain in his native land more than two years without danger of canceling his citizenship papers.

As chairman of the committee of delegation by the Federation of Citizens Associations, I supported Mrs. Shipley in her suggestion and went a little further in saying that there should be no discrimination between a naturalized citizen who visits his own country and one who visits another. If the law is for five years for any other country, it should be the same for naturalized American citizens to visit their own native countries.

Apparently we do not follow England in this particular instance as we do in other customs and laws. We forget that an American citizen who travels abroad at his own expense is an ambassador of good will for the United States.

Why should there be a discrimination between a woman American citizen and a man? As the law reads at present, a male American citizen can go in any country abroad, marry any foreign female and bring her in, regardless of the quota of her native country; whereas, a woman can only bring her spouse to the United States by preferred quota of her native country.

Flaws In A-Bomb Strategy

Why does Navy Undersecretary Kimball still gratuitously insist, as he did in a recent speech (Washington Post, May 11), that "had it not been for the A-bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we would have had to fight the military hand-to-hand on his own soil in order to force a decision"?

Surely our top defense leaders ought to have learned by now that neither the invasion of Japan, nor the destruction of Japanese cities, was necessary to defeat that nation. Japan could have been starved into total military ineffectiveness and surrender simply by continuing, and extending to her rail system, the sea-air blockade which had thoroughly crippled her military power and economic life before the first city-bombing began.

The failure to realize this and to change our plans accordingly was in part a failure to heed our intelligence. But in larger part it reflected the rigidity and sterility of our national concepts of war, which still endure. Our Army insists on occupying the enemy nation; our Navy and Marines are hot for amphibious invasion; our Air Force is fascinated by its ability at sheer mass destruction.

Unfortunately no one has an equivalent vested interest in the concept of chopping the enemy's industrial and military supply lines to pieces. Nor does anyone seem to realize that such a military concept reinforces the all-out politico-psychological warfare about which we talk so much and do so little, while the concepts of destruction and occupation in contrast minimize and defeat our psychological warfare potential.

As in Japan, so with Russia in the event of war. We would not have to occupy the land, nor flatten the cities either. What we would have to do first, at all costs, is save from the Red Army and secret police the free civilization and democratic leaders and people of western Europe, or there would be no victory worth winning. Once we had done this, we could defeat Russia through her own greatest vulnerabilities:

1. The basic weakness and insecurity of a police state among its own people, a fact which furnishes the optimum background for psychological warfare.

2. The basic vulnerability of the Russian internal economy and military power to air attack on a tenuous land transport system and a none-too-ample oil supply. Oil and transport, as we certainly ought to know, are the basic sinews of a modern industrial economy and military power.

Unfortunately, as in the case of Japan, our political leaders cannot know the potential of a strategy of combined blockade and psychological warfare unless the specialist departments tell them. The military services, pursuing their old sledge-hammer theories, do not see the potential themselves. The Air Force, which would have to be the principal executor of the air blockade (and of many aspects of psychological warfare) is actively opposed to anything which threatens its narrow concepts of mass destruction. And the poor old State Department, beset by Tafts and McCarthys, has lost the courage to propose a new and therefore "radical" concept. Who then will pick up the ball and carry it, before we go berserk from blind fright?

Memorial Day For Mental Ill

By Marquis Childs

2% Of Research

THERE WAS an unpleasant shock in the news published recently that thousands of patients in Veterans' Administration hospitals are ignored by their families and friends. They are indeed the forgotten men who wait month in and month out for some evidence that those whom they once knew and loved have not completely abandoned them.

On this Memorial Day it might not be out of place to speak about another group that tends to be forgotten. These are the mental patients whose scars are not so obvious but whose suffering is sometimes greater than that of the man who incurred physical wounds in war.

Some shocking facts come to light here, too. As of March 31 of this year the number of patients under medical care by the VA was 96,662. Of this total, 52,522 were neuropsychiatric patients. Thus 54 percent of the total care was due to mental breakdown of one kind or another.

This is a staggering figure. But then there is an even sharper jolt in the expectation for the future. A Hoover Commission task force on Federal medical services reported:

"Attention has been called to the expectation that in the hospital care of the veterans alone . . . even if no veteran with nonservice connected disability should be hospitalized except for chronic diseases, 250,000 beds will be needed by 1975 for veterans, and more than three fourths of these would be for mental patients, according to an actuarial study just made for our committee in the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co."

IN THE face of such an appalling figure, the only real hope is for advances in medical science that will help many of these men to get well so they may lead normal lives again. And among scientists and doctors the belief is growing that present research is on the threshold of momentous new discoveries which may raise the curtain of darkness for many mental sufferers.

The conviction of those who are working with the National Committee for Mental Hygiene is that Federal aid can greatly accelerate this process. That is why a number of eminent doctors and psychiatrists have testified before both Senate and House committees seeking to increase from just under ten million dollars, which was the sum allowed in the President's budget, to 26 million dollars the amount of assistance for research into mental illness.

The House did step it up by nearly five million dollars. But at this point the economy drive intervened. The House had voted down by 83 to 49 an amendment to increase the appropriation for cancer research and, therefore, it was obvious to the sponsors of a more generous program for mental health that they had no chance. These sponsors, and they include both Republicans and Democrats, have now transferred their hope to the Senate.

IT HAPPENS that Congress not so long ago passed a rivers and harbors bill filled to the brim with pork. The pet little projects for this creek and that harbor added up to many millions of dollars above and beyond what had been approved by the Bureau of the Budget. With a due shedding of crocodile tears, President Truman signed it.

Economy that is constructive takes a lot of research, intelligence and planning. Senator Paul Douglas of Illinois has proved this through two sessions of Congress.

To deny a small extra margin to research in the field of mental health seems to me the most short-sighted of economies. That margin might provide the discovery which would halve the burden of mental cases in 1975.

It is an investment in the future that can bring extraordinary returns both in dollars and cents and in human happiness and well-being. The basic fact today is that whereas 65 percent of all sickness in hospitals, clinics and private medical practice is mental and emotional illness, only 2 percent of all medical research is devoted to psychiatric problems. In other words, we are trying to find our way through the darkest tunnel of all by the pathetic flicker of a lighted match.

The Russian novelist and philosopher, Dostoevsky, who suffered so much in his own lifetime from a mental affliction, once said: "The only irremediable disaster is death." But for thousands in our mental hospitals a living death is nearly as great a disaster. We have a chance to brush back some of the shadows if we are willing to risk just a little.

Right to Strike

I want to congratulate Mr. J. A. Livingston for his thoughtful and penetrating column of May 12 on railroad labor's right to strike. It was pertinent and timely and stood apart from the mass of comment by columnists who were content to merely stir the surface of the situation and the issues involved.

Since our meeting in Washington in the summer of 1948, I have read his work with interest whenever the occasion has permitted.

Although I may sometimes disagree with his conclusions, I am impressed by the sincerity of his thoughts and his reporting.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Chances Of War

AMIDST the voices prophesying war General MacArthur declared last week that he does not believe the Soviet Union wishes or intends to commence an aggressive war during the next 10 years. This is in striking contrast with what Mr. Stewart Alsop calls "the best estimates"—they are in fact the estimates of the Air Force — that "sometime between 1952 and 1954 the Soviet Union should be capable of a surprise atomic strike which would knock out between 25 and 40 percent of the American war potential."

Lippmann

General MacArthur's estimate is that by 1952 the Soviet Union will have developed the economic potential to wage only a short war of the conventional type. The United States cannot be defeated in a short war of the conventional type. By 1952 or 1954 the Soviet Union will not be capable of waging intercontinental war against the United States. In his judgment it will take the Soviet Union some 10 years to develop the economic strength to wage a protracted war on a large scale—that is to say, an intercontinental war against the United States.

THE CRITICAL difference between the MacArthur estimate and that of the official spokesmen of the Air Force really turns on what the Russians would be capable of doing by 1952-1954. If the Russians could be capable of knocking out America, they would be masters of the world. But if all they can do is to wage a short war in Europe, then they will in the end be ruined—along with the rest of us to be sure—by the long war which America would compel them to fight.

The MacArthur view is, I take it, that the Red Army may be capable of defeating France and of neutralizing Britain by 1952-1954, but that it will not be capable of knocking out the United States—and that it will not be capable of waging the long protracted war which would follow an attack on western Europe, if the United States had not been knocked out first. General MacArthur believes that the USSR will not intentionally start a war which cannot surely be concluded and won. No world war could be won by Russia unless the United States had been defeated.

THE AIR FORCE estimate does not rest on different information. The Air Force does not know anything about Russia or about the chances of war that General MacArthur does not know. In the last analysis the Air Force is not making a military judgment about the probability of war. It is making an argument directed at Congress and the people for a larger Air Force. The argument is built on the belief that what is theoretically possible, even if it is theoretically improbable, — an atomic knockout by 1952—should be made the basis of Air Force planning, of congressional appropriations, and of popular sentiment. The Air Force believes that we should act as if there were going to be a gigantic Pearl Harbor after 1952. If we act that way, we shall vote the appropriations and make the effort necessary to have adequate military preparedness.

The 1952 estimate is not a prediction based on secret and special intelligence, it is a date selected and set far enough ahead to permit long-range planning and procurement yet not so far ahead that it raises the awkward problem of the obsolescence of present weapons. 1952 is not known by special revelation to General Vandenberg and to Mr. Symington to be doomsday. 1952 is, or at least it was when it was chosen, in part a rough guess about what the USSR might be able to do in a few years. But in the main it was a planning concept for scheduling what we ought to do in order to build up a strategic air force capable of a sustained attack on the Soviet Union.

BEING one who holds that strategic air power is the primary military instrument by which we maintain a balance of power in the world, I would certainly be in favor of voting additional funds for the Air Force when the amounts have been certified by the proper civilian and military authorities. But if the Air Force is to have more money, would it not be willing in return to conclude an armistice with American public opinion, and to agree to spare the country the propaganda which it now operates in order to get more money?

AS AN example of a propaganda speech which, though well meant of course, can do a grave injury to the national interest, we may take a look at what General Vandenberg said at Detroit May 19 in his Armed Forces Day talk.

He said that the atomic bomb has "revolutionized warfare between great nations." And that "The existence of the atomic bomb places industrial centers like Detroit on the front line of combat. Great industries and centers of industry have become major targets. When atomic bombs are used these centers can be destroyed within a few hours after an attack is launched unless they are strongly and skillfully defended. . ." But "It is practically impossible to block all access to thousands of cubic miles of atmosphere . . . We are hurrying to build a radar screen . . . But this screen, even when complete, will only provide a warning . . . We do not have the interceptor planes needed to cover all approaches today and they are not on order. The provision of a reasonably adequate air defense is not possible under our present program."

IMAGINE yourself reading this official description of the weakness of America if you are a German living in the Ruhr, a Frenchman in Lorraine or Paris, a Japanese in Tokyo, even an Englishman in London and Birmingham. You hear that Detroit is in the front line of combat, that it is not defended, that not even America with all its wealth, all its distances, all its technology, has been able to make Detroit secure. And then you read in the American press that Americans are surprised and disappointed that so many Europeans and so many Japanese would like to disentangle themselves from the cold war before it becomes the hot war that General Vandenberg takes such a desperately gloomy view of.

This kind of speech may frighten Congress into voting more airplanes for the Air Force. But at the same time it frightens our friends and allies, who are a great deal nearer the real front line than is Detroit, into paralysis and hopelessness, or it convinces them that Washington is full of reckless and immature zealots who ought to be but are not, guided by wiser and more responsible men above them.

The Chaff is naught to the Wheat

Through the awakening light of Christian Science thousands have dropped "the past"—with its anguish or threat of penalty—as a dream from which they are thankfully awakened.

Impartially, to any honest student, the teachings of Christian Science bring relief and release from human woe of every sort, disclosing the deep import of Jeremiah 23:28 "What is the chaff to the wheat? saith the Lord."

They see how this is possible and legitimate as they thoughtfully study its great textbook

Lee Reports on Job, Won't Quit

Wednesday before a grand jury in New York.

Both Lee and Remington have been under congressional fire on security grounds. Both have denied they are Communists or pro-Communists.

In a weekend statement, Lee charged that Sawyer demanded his resignation "after being directed to fire me by a Senate subcommittee." It was reported that members of the Senate Commerce Committee had called on Sawyer to drop Lee. Some Senators said an investigation of the department might be made if he didn't act.

Lee said he was "shocked" by Sawyer's order, and declared:

"The department loyalty board has cleared me after a lengthy investigation last August. The Secretary (Sawyer) himself has publicly stated he has no doubt as to my loyalty.

"My record is clear and I have nothing to hide. I am not now and I have never been a Communist. I have never been duped into joining a (Communist) front organization. It would be cowardly for me to resign under fire."

Questions of Principle

Remington has asserted he would "see this fight through; that there are questions of principle and integrity involved."

Department officials said they would not try to bar either Lee or Remington from their offices or to eject them pending the outcome of hearings.

Secretary Sawyer's announcement that he wants the two men to resign emphasized that he was not questioning their loyalty. It also stressed that if they refused to quit, proceedings would be launched to oust them.

As a World War II veteran, Remington could appeal to the Civil Service Commission if the Commerce Department decides to fire him. He served as a wartime lieutenant in Naval Intelligence.

Lee could appeal only to Sawyer himself against an adverse decision in the ouster hearings. He is not a veteran.

Dartmouth Activities Raised

Loyalty reviews against both Lee and Remington are now pending before the department's loyalty board, but no decisions have yet been reached.

Senator Ferguson (R., Mich.) told a reporter that a Senate committee that investigated Remington in 1948 has given new evidence to the House Un-American Activities Committee. Ferguson said it deals with Remington's activities as a student at Dartmouth.

The House group recently questioned Remington in a renewal of charges that he formerly was a Communist. He has made repeated denials and last year was cleared by the Federal Loyalty Board.

As to Lee, Senator Malone (R., Nev.) described him in a recent Senate speech as "the man whom the Chinese blame more than any other individual for deliberately delaying vital shipments of aviation gasoline and other supplies to Nationalist China until the Red hordes took over."

A Commerce Department official has testified that Lee never made decisions involving shipments to China.

Malone said Lee is a Manchurian-born Russian who had difficulty obtaining citizenship. He asked the Senate to check Lee's loyalty.

Tydings Hearing Postponed

In other developments:

1. A scheduled hearing by a Senate committtee investigating charges of communism in the Government was postponed until Wednesday because of the absence of Chairman Tydings (D., Md.). Tydings was reported attending the funeral of a friend in New York.

The committee had planned to hear closed-door testimony from Associate FBI Director D. M. Ladd, who directed the FBI probe of the Amerasia documents case in 1945.

2. Chief Counsel Edward P. Morgan said the Tydings Committee will soon release secret testimony by William J. (Wild Bill) Donovan, wartime head of the Office of Strategic Services, concerning the Amerasia case.

OSS agents operating under Donovan conducted the first raid on the New York offices of Amerasia magazine five years ago and reported finding hundreds of secret Government documents. The magazine is now defunt.

After the OSS raid in March, the FBI raided Amerasia headquarters in June and arrested six persons, including two State Department officials. Of the six, two were fined; the others were cleared.

The Tydings Committee reopened the case recently after Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.) contended that the Amerasia incident held the key to his general charges of communism in the State Department.

three months each. All have been free on $500 bond.

Once legal papers are processed, Lawson, Trumbo and the 11 Anti-Fascist group members will be brought into District Court here for sentencing.

In both of the rulings yesterday, Justices Black and Douglas were announced as favoring rehearings. Justice Clark, former Attorney General, took no part in either case and Justice Burton took no part in the Anti-Fascist decision.

In a brief decision-day meeting, the court failed to hand down its rulings in either of the two top sets of cases awaiting judgment: tidelands and segregation. The court did announce these decisions and rulings:

1. In a 6-to-2 split, the court overturned a lower-court ruling that the Food and Drug Administration had acted unlawfully in seizing a vitamin preparation called "nutrilite food supplement" distributed by a California firm. Justice Douglas spoke for the court, with Justices Frankfurter and Jackson dissenting and Justice Clark taking no part.

Patent Charge Upheld

2. In a 7-to-2 split, the court for the second time upheld a patent infringement charge by the Linde Air Products Co., Hammond, Ind., against three other firms. Justice Jackson spoke for the majority, with Justices Black and Douglas dissenting.

3. The court refused to consider the cases of four conscientious objectors (three of them Quakers, the fourth a Methodist) who were sentenced to jail for refusing to register under the peacetime draft. The Government contended the registration was merely an inventory of manpower and that the law exempts objectors from combatant service, once registered.

4. The court, in a short order, upheld part of a lower court decree that the United States Gypsum Co. and six other firms violated the antitrust laws by combining to restrain trade and fix prices. The ruling is the latest in 10 years of litigation growing out of patent-licensing agreements by United States Gypsum, whose board chairman is Sewell L. Avery.

5. The court refused to reconsider its 4-to-4 ruling of last month that, in effect, forced the Government to produce FBI reports in an antitrust case.

In an angry statement in New York, Lawson said he had "nothing but hatred and scorn for the Congressmen, officials and judges" connected with his case.

"This is a Truman court and it is acting as a political arm of the Administration," he said. "Nowadays the court doesn't even wait for the election returns."

Lawson said the court decision means that Congress now has the power of censorship, in violation of the Constitution.

"Congress can summon people to Washington, ask questions no one can answer and then send them to jail," he said. "There can be no limit to such censorship."

In New York City, Dr. Barsky said:

"After waiting exactly two years, the United States Supreme Court, in complete evasion of the constitutional issues involving the Un-American Activities Committee, has decided to send to jail 11 men and women—three physicians, two attorneys, two labor leaders, a professor, an outstanding novelist, a housewife and a businessman.

"These men and women were the object of attack by the Un-American Committee because of their work in behalf of the Spanish Loyalists and because of the open pro-Franco bias of the congressional committee."

from the picket line, manned by CIO textile workers, greeted other employes last week.

Then this morning came reports that dynamite had blasted the barn of one nonstriker and exploded in the yard of another. No one was injured.

The violence continued at the entrance of the plant itself when angry strikers turned over two automobiles trying to enter. Sheriff Medlin said several strikers would be charged with violating a new antiviolence ordinance. Five union men, including three officials, were arrested last week.

"We've tried every means we had to keep down trouble," Governor Browning said in Nashville. "They have defied all authority. I feel it is my duty to maintain constitutional authority and to maintain the respect and orders of the courts.

"We did all we could with the highway patrol in that regard. They have gone as far as they could without shooting, which we don't want to do. I am sending a large enough force now, I think, to prevent the slightest necessity of shooting."

The textile workers called their strike for higher wages two months ago and violence has been reported with increasing frequency as the American Enka Corp. attempted to continue production.

Telegraphers Voting On United Press Offer

New York, May 29 (U.P.).—William L. Allen, international president of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union (AFL), said today that members of the United Press division of the union were balloting on a management proposal for settling the 29-day-old teleprinter punchers' strike against the news service.

The results probably will be known Tuesday night, Allen said.

Terms of the proposal were given by J. R. Mandelbaum, commissioner of the Federal Mediation Service, who outlined the UP's position as follows:

"1. Clarification agreed upon and interpretation of the contract is no longer an issue.

"2. Company's demand for open shop abandoned; union shop reinstated.

"3. General wage increase of $2.21 across the board.

"4. Two dollars per month for those who have and for those who take hospitalization and surgical insurance. Those who have such insurance can take the $2 cash without taking any more insurance."

Oak Ridge, Tenn., May 29 (AP).—Only "several hundred" of some 4000 striking workers today answered calls of their unions to resume work on two atomic plants and other new projects here.

Ousted UMW Local Head Reinstated

Canton, Ill., May 29 (AP).—An ousted United Mine Workers local president, fined $50,000 during the soft-coal strike, today said he had been reinstated as a coal miner and offered his old job.

He is Lloyd H. Sidener, former president of UMW Local 7745, who had countered with charges of unfair labor practices against the union.

Sidener said Enos B. Campbell, superintendent of the United Electric Coal Companies mine, told him the union local had voted to drop charges against him, and that he was welcome to have his old job back at his pleasure.

Sidener was deposed as local president March 7 during the soft-coal strike after he attempted to lead a back-to-work movement. He was charged by the local with attempting to organize a second union. His fellow UMW members fined him $50,000.

Action Dropped Sunday

Today Sidener said he was told the local had dropped the action and fine against him at a meeting yesterday attended by 75 members. As to the accusations, Sidener said today, "I did not want to start a rival union to the UMW as was charged."

Sidener said he had not been contacted personally by any of the local members. However, he commented, "I'm not worried about that. I don't imagine anyone feels happy about the whole thing, and there are some red faces."

As for himself, Sidener said, "I'm happy about the way things are turning out. I expect definitely to be reinstated as president. After all, if they vindicated me, why not?"

Company, Union Share Cost

He said Campbell had told him the union and the coal firm would share the cost of paying him for time lost from work because of the ouster. He estimated this about $2200 and said he expects also to collect back pay as a union officer.

Shortly after his ouster Sidener complained to the National Labor Relations Board that the union had participated in unfair labor practices in making it impossible for him to earn a living as a miner. He also testified to a Senate Committee. The NLRB complaint in Sidener's behalf is pending in Chicago Federal District Court.

In Washington, national union officials declined to comment on the case, as did Hugh White, president of the Illinois UMW District 12.

Originally Sidener was quoted as saying that John L. Lewis, president of the UMW, failed to respect a court order to end the coal strike and had arranged signals whereby the miners in Canton were instructed not to work despite the court injunction.

Lewis was acquitted of contempt charges in court in Washington. The charges were based on Government contentions he actually did not try to get the miners back to work as ordered by the injunction.

The Government in April gave the union an opportunity to settle the case without a hearing and held up issuance by the NLRB of a formal complaint.

However, in May the Government decided to press unfair labor practices charges against the UMW and Sidener's employer. The NLRB said efforts to settle the dispute "informally" had failed. June 20 was set for a hearing at Canton.

House Group Revives Plan to Call Lewis

By the United Press

A House Labor Committee tentatively revived plans yesterday to force John L. Lewis to tell under oath whether he secretly ordered his striking miners to ignore a back-to-work court order last winter.

Salute!

Today we pay tribute to every man who has given the work of his hands, his heart, his brains and his life for the preservation of freedom and civilization in the world.

But for us, Americans, our thoughts are pointed directly to the unknown soldier—one unidentified, unidentifiable fragment of earth — who symbolizes the thousands who sacrificed themselves that we and our children's children might enjoy a fuller life of liberty and greater happiness.

The unwritten, unspoken charge we must obey is that this man's—this nation's sacrifice shall not have been made in vain.

Browns Lose Their Psychologist and Game, 12-8

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Tagging Some of the Bases:

EDDIE SAWYER, who manages the Phillies, and Bob Carpenter, who owns 'em, are running somewhat ahead of their timetable. In Florida last winter, they publicly set the season of 1951 as the year when their young ball team might mature and bring Philadelphia its first National League pennant since 1915.

They would cheerfully admit that they under-rated their kids. Right now, Sawyer has 'em on top, after dogging the Dodgers since the start of the season. And their has been nothing of a flukey nature in the rise of the Phillies. They've been overpowering most of the other clubs with a superb blend of pitching, hitting and base-running.

POVICH

This is the year when Carpenter's bonus babies are paying off. Curt Simmons, who succumbed to that $70,000 a couple years back, Robin Roberts who got $25,000 for signing, and Bob Miller, are the most potent trinity of young pitchers in the league. Their combined efforts thus far have added up to 14 wins and only 4 defeats.

They have the league's best first baseman in Eddie Waitkus, and one of the league's top outfields in Dick Sisler, Del Ennis and Richie Ashburn. And one thing for sure, in Puddinhead Jones they have the most wonderfully-named third baseman in the baseball business.

ALL IS NOT serene in the midst of the Boston Red Sox, it is now reported by the club's traveling correspondents. It has been something of a mess since the night of May 22 when the Red Sox blew a 2-run lead in Chicago, and Joe McCarthy blew his roof in a post-game dressing room lecture.

The Boston Post reported that the usually taciturn McCarthy raised his voice in a general outburst of disgust at his faltering club. McCarthy later admitted "I didn't single out any players. I just was saying something about how many ways there were to lose a ball game and that we could find them all."

The Boston Record commented that the Red Sox are a lot of overpaid prima donnas and "It was not their, friendly left field wall which they missed on the road. It was the back-slapping of their Fenway Park hero worshipers who were not around to tell them what great ball players they were."

OUT IN CLEVELAND, Hank Greenberg's innovation—jeep transportation for the relief pitchers—has inspired more gags than even Oscar Vitt's cry-baby club of the late thirties. The other day, when the jeep was making frequent trips from the Indians' bull pen with relief pitchers, Cleveland fans set up the chant "Bring 'em in two at a time."

One loud-voiced customer near Greenberg's private box suggested "Let the jeep pitch, and take the pitcher back." And there was also the advice "Watch the gas bill."

Joe Page of the Yankees has declared the jeep is a nuisance, doesn't save time, and he won't ride in it. That's his privilege. Greenberg has no jurisdiction over visiting pitchers. All he can do is offer 'em a chauffeured lift.

Greenberg's attempt to streamline the games by saving time in pitcher-changes would be unnecessary if the league's pitching were better. The long games can be traced usually to their lack of control. When good pitchers hook up, you get a ball game under two hours. League President Will Harridge, incidentally, says nobody is complaining about the length of the game except the inmates of the press boxes who are irked at the hours they put in.

IF CASEY STENGEL gets his Yankees home in front again, this is the season when he would indeed rate the label of Miracle Manager. It would dwarf his feat of last season when he nursed his band of convalescents into the pennant.

Stengel is operating this year with a Joe DiMaggio who is in a hitting slump; without Tommy Henrich, without an acceptable first baseman, and with Joe Page no longer the highly feared relief pitching ace. Page has been getting his bumps with regularity.

Yet there the Yankees are, winner of 24 of their first 34 games, and two full games on top of the Tigers. Their pitching isn't solid, a couple of clubs are outhitting 'em. But the Yankees continue to win ball games. Stengel's outfield is rarely the same two days in a row, and he's doing a juggling act with his talent at third and first base. Not at all a solid ball club. Just the hottest team in the league, that's all.

Dr. Tracy Quits, Says He Didn't Get Cooperation

St. Louis, May 30 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns lost their famed hypnotist-psychologist, Dr. David Tracy and their seventh straight ball game all in one afternoon today.

The Chicago White Sox provided the ball game loss in a slugfest, 12-8.

And before the game Dr. Tracy announced he was severing his connection with the club.

Dr. Tracy was hired by the club last spring to boost the players' confidence and morale through the application of psychology.

He was hired after the Browns finished seventh in the American League last year. Today they are in last place.

Dr. Tracy blamed "lack of cooperation from the management" for his failure to help the club.

President Bill DeWitt of the Browns said in a statement "while Tracy's services have been satisfactory and we believe he has helped a lot of the boys, we find it necessary because of small crowds and reduced gate recipts to order a retrenchment."

DeWitt declined comment on Dr. Tracy's complaint of "lack of cooperation."

As for the ball game—played before 624 fans—

The White Sox came up with two four-run innings—the first and eighth—to seal the verdict. Phil Masi drove in five runs for the Sox and Don Lenhardt hit a two-run homer for the Browns. The Browns used four pitchers with Tom Ferrick being charged with the loss. Howie Judson, second of three Chicago pitchers, was the winner.

Bassler Tops Area Open Qualifiers

Baltimore, May 29 (AP).—Charlie Bassler, host professional, shot a 70-71-141 at the Rolling Road Club today to lead the Middle Atlantic District qualifiers for the National Open golf tourney.

The next three of the five spots alloted this area went to Virginia professionals—Jack Isaacs, Langley Field, 70-72—142; John O'Donnell, Norfolk, 73-70—143, and Harold Oatman, Norfolk, 70-73—143.

The fifth spot was won by Bob Harrington, Catoctin (Md.) amateur in a playoff with Art Doering, jr., Richmond, Va., professional. Each carded 145's, but Harrington won the playoff on the second extra hole with a par 4. Doering took a 5.

Five alternates for the June 8-10 National open at the Merion Club near Philadelphia also were selected.

Doering will be the first alternate. The others are professionals—Bob Crow, of Washington's Woodmont Club and Johnny Bass, Walter Romans and Bill Clarke, all of Baltimore.

Weik, Nagy Face A's Today; Nats Drive for 4th Place

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Philadelphia, May 29.—Dick Weik, who is still trying to conquer his wildness, and Steve Nagy, who has conquered the Yankees twice, face the Philadelphia Athletics in a Memorial Day double-header here tomorrow.

Abandoned by the Nats in his last two starts, the big, fast-balling Weik will open proceedings against Bobby Shantz, the A's wee lefthander, while Nagy draws Bob Hooper, freshman righthander.

Weik, bidding for his second victory, has yielded only 10 hits in his last 16 innings, but has lost both games because the Nats didn't score a run for him in that span. He hurled a four-hitter against the Browns, losing 3-0, and came back with a 6-hitter against Cleveland and lost that by the same score.

In the Indians' game, however, Weik's control suffered a relapse as he walked ten of the Clevelanders.

Nagy, too, has been bothered by wildness. Unemployed for almost a month after he had tamed the Yankees twice in a row, the taciturn lefthander from the Coast League walked six in a four-inning stint against Cleveland last week.

"It's not like Steve to be wild and I'm not worried about it," Manager Bucky Harris said here tonight. "He's a control pitcher and all he needs is a little work. As for Weik, all he needs to get straightened out is for us to get him a few runs."

Nagy was denied an opportunity to win his third game in Washington today when the series finale with the Red Sox was postponed because of threatening weather.

Even at this early stage of the season, tomorrow's twin bill is an important one for the Nats. They've broken even in four games so far with the A's and if they can sweep the double-header, they're almost a cinch to regain fourth place inasmuch as Cleveland, current occupants by half a game, will be clashing with the red-hot Detroit Tigers.

Half-Milers Race Today At Hagerstown

Hagerstown, Md., May 29.—Maryland's 50 days of minor track racing opens at the local fair grounds tomorrow. With the exception of next Monday, the sport will be conducted daily through June 10. The Hagerstown meeting was originally scheduled for August but was reset when Charles Town failed to take its customary late May and June dates.

Little Harp 2d, Falters In Stretch

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Delaware Park, May 29.—Maine Chance Farm's Royal Blood flowed freely through a sloppy stretch today and won the thirteenth running of the $10,000 Added Wilmington Handicap. Performing before an opening day holiday eve crowd of 9000, the chestnut son of Coldstream finished four lengths ahead of the closest opposition while under the handling of Jockey Glen W. Lasswell.

Mrs. James McGee's Little Harp was sweet music to the ears of his backers when he moved at the top of the stretch but he finished on a low note in second position and only a half length in advance of Dixiana's Fleeting Star, the favorite.

Olympia Fails to Appear

The scheduled appearance of Fred W. Hooper's Olympia, the 1949 Kentucky Derby favorite, failed to materialize. Trainer Ivan Parke withdrew the Heliopolis colt when early morning downpours made the track resemble a tributary of nearby Christiana Creek.

Royal Blood, in winning for the first time this year in five tries, was second choice in the betting and returned a $9.30 mutuel.

Win Nets $8925

Winner in 3 of his 17 starts, Royal Blood rolled up $26,915 in earnings last year. Today's effort netted $8925 and brought his 1950 total to $11,525.

Jockey Rocco Sisto, one-time Washington, D. C., amateur boxer, escaped with a mud bath in a spill that marked the first race. His mount, Classic Verse, stumbled and went down at the far turn.

Service organizations were honored by the sixth and seventh events. Mrs. Eben H. Ellison, jr.'s Sun Bahram took the Veterans of Foreign Wars purse by four lengths as a $5.10 favorite and David Neuman's Busy Dream annexed the American Legion Purse by a head paying $36.70.

Defend Crown Today

W-L 'Miracle Crew?' 'Cinderella Boys?' Not This Year—They're Seasoned, Champions

By Happy Walker

ISN'T IT just about time to drop such descriptives as miracle crew, Cinderella boys and Horatio Alger athletes in talking about the Washington and Lee varsity crew, currently pacing the national high school rowing field.

Walker

First year winners of the famed Stotesbury crown and the national title, achieved under the training of an inexperienced coach, and the fact that the crew cut their teeth on a borrowed Potomac Boat Club shell naturally called for such ratings up to now.

But today, the Little Generals are the undisputed national high school rowing champions, earning that distinction by sweeping every meet they entered last year with a repeat of these sterling achievements just about in their grasp for this year.

So now, it's the seasoned, resolute, acknowledged national high school rowing champs, Washington and Lee varsity, under Coach Charlie Butt, who are defending their national crown at Princeton today against the cream of the country's high school varsity shell crews.

Seven holdovers from last year will man the eight-oared shell with Kado Beacham at bow, Foster Smith, No. 4; Milton Irvin, No. 5; Paul Yeager, captain, No. 6; Roger Scott, No. 7; Pete Sparhawk, No. 8, and Dick McCombs. Newcomers Dave Scofield and Wes Dalby are at the Nos. 2 and 3 positions.

THE EXTENDED Memorial Day weekend played havoc with most of the cruising and sailing club arrangements committees, there being four days to plan for rather than three. The Potomac River Sailing Association staged their traditional Gunston Cove rendezvous sail race on Saturday which turned out to be one of the slowest events in recent years.

To top off the disappointing Saturday showing, most of the novelty races scheduled for Sunday were rained out leaving the hearty sailors to idle away the hours in story telling and gear inspection. Many of the skippers returned to their desks yesterday but will be back today for the final race up river to the Old Dominion Boat Club, where the first boat to cross the finish line will be awarded the coveted secretary's trophy.

VA Layoff Notices For 1390 Workers Slated Wednesday

The Veterans' Administration will give layoff notices Wednesday to 1390 of its employes who are working on the GI insurance dividend project. The cutback was fully expected.

Several months ago there was a peak of 3400 employes, mainly temporaries, on the insurance dividend work. Only about 400 will remain after the 30-day notices to the 1390 become effective on June 30.

It's possible that VA will decide to pay another dividend to GIs next spring. If a decision is made to do it a skeleton staff of present employes will be retained to plan and direct the new payments. Otherwise, the entire staff will be wiped out.

The layoffs will produce repercussions in other VA offices here. Included in the 1390 slated for the ax are 387 clerks, GS-2 and 3's, who have permanent status. As such, they have reassignment rights throughout the agency. In other words, they can bump employes in other offices with fewer retention points.

Besides, there are small groups of punch-card and tabulating machine operators with permanent status among the 1390.

Just about all of the VA insurance dividend employes took the tests for temporary jobs to open up soon at the Census Bureau here. Within a month Census will be hiring hundreds of clerks and tabulating machine operators to analyze results of the recent general census. More than 5000 new employes will be hired at Census headquarters here from the 35,000 persons who took Civil Service exams earlier this year

MARITIME: This harassed agency is about ready to swing the ax again. The cut, if it finally goes through, will include many career people with 20 to 30 years of service. Career veterans also would be among those fired. This is the story:

Maritime plans to give out what amounts to provisional layoff notices to 10 percent of its staff, or about 175 employes. The cut would get the agency in the clear to operate under its 1951 budget as approved by the House. The House, as everyone should know by this time, added the Taber-Thomas rider that would require most agencies to make an immediate 10 percent cut

But if the Senate, as expected, modifies or kills the rider, all or part of the notices would be recalled. Officials concede that a good many adjustments would have to be made in any event. Notices will go out Wednesday.

Maritime has had such a rough time on its budget and personnel that its officials don't want to take a chance on Taber-Thomas not becoming law.

SPA: Members of the Society for Personnel Administration are voting on the following candidates for its offices: President—Cecil E. Goode, VA; O. Glenn Stahl, Federal Security, and David T. Stanley, Defense. Vice President—E. R. Draheim, Agriculture; John E. Moore, Federal Personnel Council and Fred Zappolo, ECA execbard, personnel council, and Karl Barnes, Agriculture; Henry Hubbard, personnel council and Karl Stromson, Interior. Secretary-Treasurer—Esther Lawton, Treasury; Ellen E. Manchester, Civil Service and Irma Stark Whipple, Naval Research Center. Advisory committee candidates are: Laura Duncan, Agriculture; Charles F. Edwards, VA; Warren L. Jensen, Army; Kent Presson, GAO; John A. Stromp, Commerce; Quanita M. Vidi, Interior; Louise Wilson, ECA; and Phillip H. Whitbeck, Navy.

Suit to Bar School Vote In Fairfax Dismissed

Petition Founded On 'Assumption' Of Annexation Is Illegal, Judge Rules

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

A last-ditch effort to block a $10,500,000 school bond issue referendum in Fairfax County Wednesday was thrown out of the county's Circuit Court yesterday.

After a hearing lasting less than 15 minutes, Judge Paul E. Brown dismissed a petition filed by John H. King seeking to vacate an order issued by Judge Brown May 15, in which he set the date for the bond issue vote.

King, who lives near Falls Church in an area which would be taken from the county if the current Falls Church annexation suit is successful, charged that residents of two so-called "annexation zones" might be forced to pay part of the bond debt even though they would receive no benefit from the expenditure.

In his petition, filed at the opening of court yesterday, King said the "annexable zone" near Falls Church represented about one-sixth of the assessed real estate value of the county. Therefore, he contended, its residents would be liable for "at least one and one half million dollars" of the total bond debt if the annexation is successful.

Charges Benefit Denial

At the same time, he charged, they would be denied any benefits of school construction under a 1950 statute which provides that county authorities may not build any public improvements in annexation territory after entry of a decree ordering the annexation.

After hearing demurrers to the petition by Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh Marsh and John Alexander, attorney for the county school board, Judge Brown dismissed the action. In rejecting the petition, Brown said King had argued a question properly should have been taken to the annexation court rather than the Circuit Court. He also noted that King's petition was defective because it failed to name a defendant and was based on an "assumption" of what might transpire, subject to a final ruling by the annexation tribunal.

King formally noted an exception to the decision.

County voters will ballot Wednesday from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m., daylight time, on the bond issue proposal.

Voter Eligibility Clarified

Since the referendum is a special election, county officials have issued instructions to clarify the eligibility of voters. Eligible participants, according to Circuit Court Clerk Thomas P. Chapman include (1) voters who were qualified to vote in the general election last year; (2) persons whose poll tax was paid on or before December 13, 1949, and who are properly registered, and (3) those who became 21 on or after January 1, 1949, provided they have registered. The latter group is not required to pay the poll tax for this year.

The bond issue, if approved, will be used to carry out an ambitious program of school construction to offset "deplorable" overcrowding in most of the county's present schools. Planned to meet needs through the 1950-51 school year, the program calls for erection of 11 new schools and alterations or additions to virtually all the other 40 schools in the system.

The proposal has been widely indorsed by parent-teacher groups, the county's teachers and numerous other organizations. Principal opposition has come from two groups, the Fairfax County Committee for Better Government, headed by King, and the Taxpayers' Advisory Association.

Basic contention of the opponents follows the line of King's petition. Not only will residents of the two "annexation zones" be required to share in the bond debt if both annexation suits are successful, they claim, but they also will be required to share the cost of schools which they say will have to be built in both zones.

Clarke Indorses Issue

Proponents of the bond issue are relying on a "just and equitable" decision by the annexation court to prevent anything resembling dual taxation.

The name of State Senator Andrew W. Clarke of Belle Haven, was added yesterday to the county officials and civic leaders who have indorsed the bond issue. In his first public announcement, Clarke said he favored the expenditure because the county's school children are "entitled to the classroom time that cannot be given them under the half-day system now in effect in the overcrowded lower grades.

Meanwhile, almost overshadowed by the enormous school bond issue is a second issue on which voters also will ballot on Wednesday. It calls for $980,000 worth of bonds to finance improvements to the county courthouse.

The courthouse bond issue, if successful, would provide an addition to the present building to include added office space, courts and a new county jail. The latter would replace the present outmoded prison which has been the scene of two successful prison breaks in the last two years.

In July World Leader Of Adventists Will Retire

ELDER McELHANY
. . . retires in July

Elder J. Lamar McElhany, world leader of the Seventh-day Adventists since 1936, will retire in July, it was learned yesterday.

Formal announcement of his retirement as president of the World General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists will be made at the group's Quadrennial World Conference in July in San Francisco. World headquarters of the Adventists is at Takoma Park.

Elder McElhany, 70, and his wife plan to leave Takoma Park soon to make their home in California.

The Adventist leader began his career in the church at 23 as a missionary in Australia, New Zealand, and the Philippines. Later he returned to the United States to head the church's groups in New York, California and, for two years, the District of Columbia conference.

In 1926 he was named head of the Adventist Church of North America, and 10 years later was elected world head of the denomination.

Last night members of the Takoma Park Seventh-day Adventist Church paid tribute to Elder McElhany for his long service at a program at the church, Laurel and Willow aves.

Underestimate Of School Costs Charged

Arlington County school classrooms are costing taxpayers "several times the amount" similar rooms are costing elsewhere in Virginia, the county treasurer has charged.

John Locke Green, in a letter to Mrs. Elizabeth P. Campbell, chairman of the Arlington County School Board, wrote that "there can be no question" about the relatively high cost of the classrooms, and added: "I feel that Arlington taxpayers have a right to a complete and full explanation of this tremendous cost."

Green said that during the period from 1940 through 1948 the county public school system was augmented by 149 schoolrooms at a cost of $1,966,000, "showing that these classrooms, during war-time, were built at a cost of a little over $13,000 per room."

Green challenged recent figures on school costs in the county and said that figures released by school officials are in conflict. He said he had learned it will "take another million dollars" to finish school construction now underway providing 94 rooms and 49 classrooms.

"If that be true," wrote Green, "then the cost per classroom is going to run between $75,000 and $80,000. However, I doubt that you would know this," he wrote, "as the School Board and its officials appear to have three or four different sets of figures."

Waterless Yacht Soon Gets Plenty Off Water Street

Walter S. McDowell, a yachtsman, of 3344 Denver st. se., had been having trouble with the water system on his 38-foot craft.

Yesterday, he found the boat, fully equipped with running water, sunk five feet deep off the Eastern Power Boat Club, 14th and Water sts. se.

McDowell told Harbor Police after they pumped the yacht dry, that he had been working on the water system, and evidently had forgot to tighten something.

Marital Loss Suit Legal, Judge Rules

Wife Has Right To Normal Life, Court Says in Case Of Injured Mate

A wife has as much right to her husband's "conjugal relations" as he has to hers, the United States Court of Appeals decided yesterday.

Because of this single-standard doctrine, Mrs. Lucia Hitaffer, 46, of 1815 Fort Davis dr. se., was given another chance to win her suit for $10,000 for loss of the "aid, assistance and enjoyment, specifically sexual relations," of her spouse, Pierce Henry Hitaffer, about 50.

Hitaffer injured his abdomen severely in 1947 when he fell from a ladder while working as maintenance man for the Argonne Co., Inc., at 1629 Columbia rd. nw., defendant in the wife's suit.

He collected workmen's compensation for injuries he suffered, but Mrs. Hitaffer brought suit for the resultant marital losses to her. In District Court, her suit was dismissed and she appealed through Attorney Edgar A. Wren.

Only In Washington

Through Judge Bennett Champ Clark, the Appeals Court ruled that a wife can maintain a suit for loss of her husband's consortium due to an injury caused by the defendant's negligence. Washington is probably the only jurisdiction where this is possible, according to Judge Clark.

"Consortium" has been variously defined in legal opinions but this is what Judge Clark says it means in Washington:

"Consortium, although it embraces within its ambit of meaning the wife's material services, also includes love, affection, companionship, sexual relations, etc., all welded into a conceptualistic unity."

Since the husband can sue under the decisions for loss of his wife's consortium if she gets hurt or if she is seduced, there is no logical reasons why the wife can't do the same thing if the shoe is on the other foot, said the judge.

"Legal Gymnastics"

The Appeals Court recalled other decisions denying wives the right to sue for loss of consortium, and declared they were the result of "legal gymnastics." The court said they were based on the false premise that the injury to the wife was "remote".

"Furthermore, we can conceive of no reasons for denying the wife this right," said Judge Clark. "On the contrary, it appears to us that logic, reason and right are in favor of the position we are now taking.

"The medieval concepts of the marriage relation to which other jurisdictions have reverted in order to reach the results which have been handed to us as evidence of the law have long since ceased to have any meaning. It can hardly be said that a wife has less of an interest in the marriage relation than does the husband or in these modern times that a husband renders services of such a different character to the family and household that they must be measured by a standard of such uncertainty that the law cannot estimate any loss thereof.

What Husband Owes

"The husband owes the same degree of love, affection, felicity, etc., to the wife as she to him. He also owes the material service of support, but above and beyond that he renders other services as his mate's helper in her duties, as advisor and counselor, etc. Under such circumstances it would be a judicial fiat for us to say that a wife may not have an action for loss of consortium due to negligence."

The opinion states further "this result poses no problems in ascertaining the wife's damages. Simple mathematics will suffice to set the proper quantum."

The appeals decision was concurred in by Judge Wilbur K. Miller. Judge Charles Fahy concurred in the result only.

Child Day Care Hearing Is Set By House Group

A House hearing on continuing the District child day care centers has been set for 10 a. m. Thursday.

It will be held by the District subcommittee headed by Representative Thomas G. Abernethy (D., Miss.) in the House District Committee room, No. 445 Old House Office Building.

The Senate has approved a bill to continue the child day care centers as a permanent District government program.

Full Industrial Survey Urged To Save 'Fair'

Sesqui General Manager Paul Massmann yesterday proposed that full Sesqui Commission, at its Thursday meeting, order a complete survey of industry and labor's interest in the Freedom Fair, it was learned last night.

Approval of such a canvass would, in effect stave off the full commission's decisive action this week on its executive committee's recommendation that Freedom Fair be abandoned.

Massmann made the suggestion in a memorandum to Carter, Barron, Sesqui executive vice chairman, late yesterday.

Barron declined comment, saying it was a matter for the commission to decide.

The Basic Question

Massmann said the "basic question has been and still is": would industry and labor sufficiently support by payment of rentals and construction of exhibits the exposition project known as Freedom Fair?

All other questions of intent, site and mechanics of operating the fair are incidental to this underlying consideration, said Massmann.

Unless the "real facts" on industry-labor support or apathy are on hand, he explained, "the civil war now raging over who killed cock robin will continue" even if the full commission votes to cancel out the exposition.

He recalled that the General Accounting Office already has approved spending up to $150,000 for an industry survey, and that it could be conducted either by the Sesqui Leasing Bureau through Jack Handy, New York management consultant, or through creation of an exhibits division in the Sesqui Commission.

Not Until Spring 1952

Should the commission vote a survey at this late date, Massmann figures the fair, if given the green light, probably could not open until the spring of 1952.

The commission will meet at 3 p. m. Thursday in the Senate District Committee Room at the Capitol.

Meanwhile, the Freedom Fair steering committee of the Federation of Business Men's Associations, Inc., held a luncheon meeting yesterday at the Lafayette Hotel, with J. A. Kamerow presiding.

Later Kamerow announced the officially-named "Greater Washington Citizens Committee on the Freedom Fair" will hold its first formal business meeting at 8:30 p. m. Wednesday in the Chantilly Room of the Hamilton Hotel to appoint officers and "draw up specific recommendations on the how and why Freedom Fair will be staged, whether or not the Sesqui Commission votes to support it."

Bids for Parking Lot

The commission yesterday opened seven bids for operating a 790-car parking lot near the Rock Creek Park Amphitheater.

The bids indicated the percentage of gross receipts the firms would contribute to the Federal Government. They were opened in the presence of Wash B. Williams, chairman of the commission's concession committee at Sesqui headquarters, 1400 Pennsylavnia ave. nw.

Bids and percentages offered were: Auto City Parking Co., 628 G st. nw., 55 percent; Nationwide Parking Co., 1500 New Hampshire ave. nw., 40 percent; Automatic Parking Service, Boston, Mass., 53 percent; A. G. Denzendorf, Inc., 1419 Eye st. nw., 25 percent of gross plus 10 percent of net profit; Arrow Parking Co., 1100 S. Capitol st., 76½ percent, and the Kinney Corp., Newark, N. J., 34 percent.

A cartoon by Washington Post Cartoonist Herblock will be raffled off during the day to benefit the school's scholarship fund.

To Be Auctioned

D. C. Seizes Keleher Furniture

More grief came yesterday to Mrs. Anna T. (Dolly) Keleher, former wife of the retired gambler.

The District government announced it had seized for taxes the furnishings that until recently decorated her Woodley Park Towers apartment.

Dolly received the news at Gallinger Hospital, where she has been under observation for a lung condition since May 10—the day of her eviction from her apartment for non-payment of rent.

District Tax Collector Guy Pearson said the "valuable rugs, furniture, fixtures, statuary and other appurtenances" will be sold at public auction Thursday at 10 a. m. by the firm of Adam A. Weschler at 905 E st. nw.

The Kelehers—Dolly and her former husband, John B. (Dapper Jack)—owe $1628.70 in unpaid personal property taxes, penalties and interest, Pearson said. They have been delinquent since 1948.

Pearson said he had been told "by a reliable source" that the furnishings are "worth much more than the amount of unpaid taxes due."

Any surplus from the sale will be deposited in the United States Treasury until claimed by the "rightful owner."

The furnishings, which include a Capehart, Chippendales, and an Italian marble statue of Aurora, Goddess of Dawn, have been in storage. Last Saturday they were removed to the place of auction.

Payment for purchases must be in cash, Pearson said.

Hearing Delay Ordered in Wife-Shooting

The hearing of Homer H. Whitlock, on charges of shooting his wife Monday at their Camp Springs, Md., home, was postponed indefinitely yesterday in Marlboro Police Court pending outcome of the woman's injuries.

Whitlock, 28, was returned to the Marlboro Jail, where he is being held in lieu of $10,000 bond on a charge of assault with intent to kill.

Meanwhile, Whitlock's 23-year-old wife, Dorothy, was reported as improving in Providence Hospital. Authorities there said she was "not seriously shot"

Mrs. Whitlock was brought to the hospital about 2 a. m. Monday by her husband with a bullet in her throat, Prince Georges County police said. Whitlock did not stay at the hospital, but was arrested some time later

He led police to his auto, parked in woods near his home, where they found his two scantily-clad children. The children, Warren, 2, and Beverley, 7 months, are being cared for by Whitlock's parents in Washington, police said.

The shooting followed an argument between the couple after they returned from a party, police learned. The weapon was described as a .25-caliber German-make automatic pistol.

A bicycle parade, softball game and dance recital will mark the Fairlington Civic Association's Memorial Day program at Fairlington Elementary School from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. today. The Arlington County Recreation Department will sponsor a track and field meet.

Ministerial Union Elects Willingham

The Rev. Dr. Edward B. Willingham, pastor of National Memorial Baptist Church, 16th st. and Columbia rd. nw., was elected president of the Washington Ministerial Union yesterday.

He succeeds the Rev. Dr. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church. Election of officers took place at the final meeting until fall of the Protestant group in Anacostia Methodist Church, 14th and U sts. se.

Other officers chosen are: The Rev. Warren E. Mace, Episcopal Church of the Epiphany, vice president; the Rev. Edwin B. Lewis, Union Methodist, secretary; the Rev. Robert Sherrill, Washington Heights Presbyterian, treasurer.

New members of the board of directors are the Rev. Dr. Fred C. Williams, Clarendon Methodist, the Rev. Robert W. Brooks, Lincoln Congregational Temple, and the Rev. Robert Van Deusen, Lutheran Church Center.

McGuinness Is Honored on Retirement

Hugh J. McGuinness, who retires Wednesday as civilian chief of passenger traffic in the Office of the Chief of Transportation of the Army, was given a testimonial dinner last night by Army and private transportation officials at the Hotel Roosevelt.

McGuinness

During his 33 years with Army transport, McGuinness, who is 60, has won several citations, including the Exceptional Civilian Service Gold Medal, highest commendation a civilian Army employe can receive. The award was made by Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson for McGuinness' "resourcefulness and ability" in planning the movement of troops and equipment during the war.

Among those honoring McGuinness last night were Maj. Gen. I. A. Heilman, Army chief of transportation and Col. E. C. R. Lasher. McGuinness and his wife, who live at 1900 F st. nw., plan to spend much of their time in Orlando, Fla., where they have a home.

5000 Bolling Airmen Face Questioning In Slaying

Search for Killer Of Gordon Brown Extended; 24-Hour Quizz Continues

Bolling Air Base and Metropolitan police said yesterday they would question the entire personnel of the base—some 5000 airmen—in their investigation into the slaying early Saturday of 24-year-old Gordon C. Brown.

The investigators at first thought they would limit their questions to airmen stationed at the south end of the field, where Brown was found unconscious.

But yesterday Bolling authorities said they had no suspects, and Capt. Jeremiah Flaherty of the homicide squad said his detectives would employ the process of elimination used in the Lansburgh murders.

Question Day and Night

Fifty investigators—police and agents of Bolling's Office of Special Investigators—have been assigned to the round-the-clock questioning.

The Metropolitan Police contigent includes at least six veteran homicide detectives and two homicide lieutenants—Richard Felber, who headed the Lansburgh case, and Jack Baker.

Their theory is it was a base-stationed airman who shot Brown and left him for dead. Brown's head was bludgeoned, perhaps by a pistol butt. There were "slight" strangulation marks on his neck.

Six airmen—including a 28-year-old sergeant—who left the base from the time Brown's body was discovered until about noon, have been questioned and apparently are regarded with no more suspicion than other personnel.

Weapon Still Sought

Lieutenant Baker's theories on motives are these: either intended robbery or robbery, or a fight over failure to pay fare.

He said the weapon had not been recovered and ballistic tests on the death bullet have not been received.

The police timetable leaves a 45-minute period in which the murder was committed. Brown checked in at the main gate at 1:50 a. m.

Died Two Hours Later

About 2:30 he was found moaning about a mile from the main gate and 30 feet from his cab. He died in the base hospital a little more than two hours later.

Brown drove a taxicab part-time. He was employed at the Postoffice Department.

He was married, the father of a 4-year-old son, and lived at 224 Carmody Hills dr., Carmody Hills, Md., near Seat Pleasant.

Masonic services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday at the Lee funeral home, 4th st. and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Schwab's Term On Recreation Board Expires

James E. Schwab's term on the District Recreation Board expired yesterday, and there was no official word one way or the other on his reappointment.

A member of the board since 1942, he has been acting as its vice chairman.

Schwab has told reporters he feels the Interior Department is anxious to spike his reappointment because of his attitude toward segregation. In the recent swimming pool controversy he lined up with the board majority in refusing to accept operation of the pools on a nonsegregated basis.

The District Commissioners must reappoint Schwab or name a successor, but yesterday none was available for comment.

Safecrackers Take $2400 From Store, P. O. Branch

Safecrackers stole $2400 in cash, stamps and travelers' checks from a drugstore and branch postoffice Sunday night, police reported yesterday.

The battered safe was found near the Florida ave. entrance to Garfield Hospital early yesterday. It came from the Bunker Hill Pharmacy, 2011 Bunker Hill rd. ne.

Police said a box in the safe contained $1400 in cash, and $1000 in stamps, travelers' checks and postal notes.

The checks were in $20 denomination, and had serial numbers B89-257-943 to B89-257-952.

Nickel-in-Parking-Slot Plan Shelved Before It Is Started

In a Good Samaritan-good promotion act, which was to begin yesterday, the station planned to send agents to slip coins into red-flagged meters, thus saving violators from nasty old parking tickets.

When Herman M. Paris, WWDC commercial manager, was told yesterday by Traffic Division Capt. L. T. Johnson that cars would be checked for overtime parking regardless of nickels in the meter, Paris called the whole thing off. He's now stuck with about 1000 leaflets which were to tell grateful parkers who provided the nickels.

Suspect Nabbed After Chase Held in 75c Purse-Snatching

Police yesterday charged James H. Thurston, 30, with robbery and assault after a chase Sunday night in a 75-cent robbery.

Mrs. Mildred Uzmed, of 4116 New Hampshire ave. nw., said a man struck her in the face and seized her purse, containing 75 cents and personal papers, at 13th and I sts. nw., about 11 p. m.

Three passersby took after the man. They almost lost him when he ducked under a Greyhound bus. Two scout car policeman arrested Thurston in a dead end at the rear of the 1100 block of 11th st. nw.

The pursuers were John Taylor, a sailor stationed at Norfolk, Va., and Frank Kirby, of 2800 74th ave., Hyattsville, and William E. Yost, of 3407 39th ave. Colmar Manor, Md., both pressmen for the Washington Times-Herald.

Stores' Profit Sags to 2.7% On 1949 Sales

By S. Oliver Goodman

Department stores in 1949 netted 3 cents on every dollar of sales, as compared with 3.8 cents the previous year.

This and other facts about the trend of 400 department and specialty store sales in 1949 were revealed yesterday in the 25th annual study made by the Controllers Congress of the National Retail Dry Goods Association.

Store sales declined 6 percent while prices of merchandise fell 14 percent.

Operating costs rose to 31.8 per cent of sales from 30.1 percent in 1948.

Markdowns increased to 7.5 percent in 1949 compared with 7 percent in 1948.

The average sale in department stores last year was $4.30, compared with $4.49 in the previous year.

Although radio departments reported severe declines in sales, there was an increase of 212 per cent over 1948 in sales of television sets. As a result, the combination of radios, phonographs and television showed a sales increase of 23 percent.

Commenting on the year's highlights, the NRDGA said:

"The one merchandising development which overshadowed all others in 1949 was the extensive setbacks suffered in most women's apparel lines and in piece goods departments. Men's clothing departments experienced a sales decline of 10 percent with little change in transactions, while increased markdowns offset a slightly higher mark on and brought gross margin to 29.9 percent. In store departments devoted to home furnishings there was little change from 1948 figures experienced in the over-all unit sales, although dollar sales declined according to the general store pattern."

World Cooperation Tour Planned

Work for Peace, Mrs. Buck Urges Club Federation

By Mary E. Prim

Boston, May 29 (AP).—Mrs. J. L. Blair Buck, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, tonight urged American clubwomen to work for peace "as hard as you worked to win World War II."

The Richmond, Va., resident spoke at the dinner meeting of the fifty-ninth annual convention of the GFWC, convening in Boston where the woman's club idea started—and was quickly banned—back in 1637. Mrs. Buck recalled that the federation had met twice before in the Boston area—in 1908 and 1929—and there was a World War between each visit.

"Must there be a third World War before we come again to Boston?" she asked. "I think the women will have something to say about that if they do all they can to build peace throughout the world."

Before the dinner, Mrs. Hiram C. Hougton, Red Oak, Iowa, slated to succeed Mrs. Buck as president, announced she would lead a group of 24 GFWC members on a world cooperation tour of Europe. The women will leave New York City August 28 by plane and return October 3, after visiting nine European countries.

Some 1800 top club officials came to a dinner party in Mechanics Building to start off a five-day assembly with the theme: "World Cooperation or Chaos".

Complete with New England clam chowder, baked beans and brown bread, the dinner was planned by a "daughter" group, the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs.

Gov. Paul A. Dever and Mayor John R. Hynes welcomed delegates to the Commonwealth whose first Puritan officials frowned on progressive Ann Hutchinson's original women's club.

Mrs. Hutchinson, who used to meet with Boston women to discuss Sunday sermons, eventually was banished from the Massachusetts Bay Colony after she was found guilty of "traducing the ministers and their ministries." The court decree said: "Some few women may meet together for prayer and mutual advice." But it added an "assembly as is in practice in Boston is unlawful when 60 or more meet every week and one woman takes upon herself the whole exercise."

Presiding at the opening dinner session were Mrs. Grace Morrison Reynolds, honorary president of the General Federation, and Mrs. Lewis C. Stevens, Massachusetts State Federation president.

Juniors Hear Plea For Molding Character

Boston, May 29 (U.P.).—Young clubwomen of the world were urged today to return prayers to the family table and bring the world out of its "moral and spiritual collapse."

Mrs. Oscar A. Ahlgren of Whiting, Ind., told the junior department of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to "teach your children to pray."

"As young mothers you hold the most precious possession in the world in your hands—the molding of character," she said at the opening of the federation's fifty-ninth annual convention.

"Something is missing" from the home, Mrs. Ahlgren said. "Unless we capture some of the virtue of the old fashioned American home, our civilization is doomed."

"We are in the mess we are in today because we have had a moral and spiritual collapse. We can never have material security in the world until we have soul security. We must renew our faith in God and in the brotherhood of man."

To Consider Resolution On Crime Films

The delegates will be asked to approve at this convention a resolution condemning crime movies for their "corrupting influence on the minds of young people." Murder films "may be in part responsible for the great increase in crime and disregard for life," the resolution says. When distributed overseas, such pictures "misrepresent life in the United States."

Other resolutions to be considered urge adoption of President Truman's "Point Four" program for assistance to underdeveloped areas, stiffer penalties for sex offenders and reduction of Federal excise taxes.

Retiring to Write Memoirs, Mary Norton Tells Democrats

AFTER 25 years in the House of Representatives, America's first Democratic Congresswoman, Mary Norton, is retiring to write her memoirs.

At the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club given in her honor yesterday, Mrs. Norton said that she will spend most of her future years putting down on paper her experiences as the first woman to be a State chairman in the the Democratic Party, the first woman to be appointed chairman of a congressional committee (the committee on the District of Columbia) and the first woman to be a state chairman in the Democratic National Committee.

Representative Clarence Cannon, her colleague from Missouri, will assist the retiring Representative to compile data for the book, she announced.

In her address to the clubwomen, Representative Norton outlined the vital role women should play in national and international affairs, deploring the fact that members of her sex "have not achieved their rightful place in the political arena."

In fact, she continued, if the United Nations fails, "women cannot cast aside the blame which would be theirs in not supporting it to the fullest."

Also, she urged the clubwomen to assume an active part in home State campaigning for congressional seats in the forthcoming elections.

Mrs. India Edwards, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, was on hand to introduce the honor guest.

New Portuguese Envoy To Arrive Next Week

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

TO THE many friends of the late Fernado Saboia de Medeiros, happy bachelor of the Brazilian Embassy, it will be news that his sister, Mme. Fernandez, is new chatelaine of the Portguese Embassy.

The former Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy was one of the popular young members of the Diplomatic Corps, had a promising future in his country's foreign service. He met a tragic death a year or two ago while motoring from Spain to Paris, where he was to be First Secretary at the Brazilian Embassy. He had left Washington a few weeks before, and had been visiting the Fernandez family in Lisbon.

The Portuguese Embassy's new tenant, Ambassador Fernandez, is expected in Washington next week, and Mme. Fernandez will join him here later. A career diplomat for 30 years, the Ambassador is a man of cosmopolitan tastes. He's a collector of antiques, has some exceptionally fine Chinese examples which he combines with his favorite modern paintings by European artists.

Ambassador Fernandez's love of Oriental art probably stems from his first diplomatic assignment, wit hthe Portuguese Legation in Peking, where he was later to serve as Charge d'Affaires for many years.

He has also been stationed in Paris, London, Tokyo, Pretoria and Madrid, and was Portuguese permanent delegate to the League of Nations from 1926 to 1939. He comes to Washington from Lisbon where his title was Director General of Economic Affairs.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Man, 32, Is Completely Smitten With Girl Who Is 20, and Hesitates to Propose Because Of Age Difference; Is This Sound Judgment?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have fallen completely for a girl who is 20 years old. I am 32. We have the same kind of background and upbringing and are of the same religion.

The only thing that keeps me from proposing marriage is the thought that when I reach 65, which is getting to be the standard age for compulsory retirement in modern industry, Helen will be only 53, and hardly ready to "go on the shelf" with a small retirement income. Also I consider the fact that with a wife so much younger, we could have minor children when I reached 65.

I am just wondering, in the light of this, if I would be fair to Helen if I married her, even though she does love me. I realize there is no such thing as being predestined to love only one person, and if I let her go, she can find someone closer to her age.

I know that life is extremely uncertain and maybe I just think too much. After all, we could both be wiped out by an atomic bomb or the bubonic plague before I reach the age of 65. In any event, I would like to have your comments on the problem as I see it. C. S.

He Covers Fear of Marriage

DEAR C. S.: You aren't brought to a standstill as regards Helen due to thinking too much. Rather your mind is working overtime producing plausible theories as to why you can't take action. This is known as rationalizing a handicap, instead of coming to grips with the truth of it.

The problem is that fundamentally you are a timid and discouraged person, and you fear marriage as a test that you don't expect to pass successfully. Because of this, your spontaneous urge to marry the girl with whom you feel in complete accord, is blocked by your chronic pessimism,—a defeatist attitude that you try to justify with supposedly sensible arguments against proposing.

Thus you see it would be wrestling with smoke screen stuff, instead of drilling for the real difficulty, if one spent time discussing your alleged forethought about life after 65.

Man's Dilemma Isn't Rare

YOUR psychological dilemma isn't uncommon. Rather it is a problem experienced by nearly all unmarried persons,—nearly all of whom would be married if it weren't for their ingrained handicap of self-distrust, which impels them to require guarantee of the perfect set-up with the perfect partner before they'll risk the step. And since that much of a good thing doesn't descend on anybody, they stay single and call it fate, usually reciting various "reasons",—such as family duties, or ill health, or thwarted love, or wrong suitors, etc.,—for their barren status.

However, you seem to be on the verge of awareness that your defensive argumentation is somehow hollow, and I consider that a hopeful sign. It suggests that you aren't rigidly closed to the possibility of making deep changes for the better in your emotional constitution. And for guidance in that undertaking, I recommend careful reading of Dr. Rudolph Dreikurs' book, "The Challenge of Marriage," (Duell, Sloan & Pearce),—a remarkably clear and fascinating study of this most vital human relationship.

Writing in Chapter 4 on "Choosing a Mate," Dr. Dreikurs has many interesting things to say, and lucidly relevant to your case, is the following: "The real reasons why we choose a mate usually remain secret and are supplanted by plausible rationalizations. Many believe in marrying for security. There is no security obtainable through marriage. There is no security in life at all. Marriage does not solve any problems; it remains a problem in itself, which has to be solved, and merely adds a new task to the others with which life confronts us . . ." But get the book. It will amply repay your attention to it. M. H.

The Old Lamp Gleaming Like New To These Suggestions Will Have A New Shade Fashioned According

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to go about recovering an old lamp shade frame, or refer me to a book where I can obtain this information?

G. L. C., Washington.

You'll find detailed instructions for this project in the Woman's Home Companion Household Book (Doubleday). Basic directions are as follows. (If you'd like more, consult the book available at libraries and book stores.)

(Fabric shades are made primarily in two ways—either on a bare frame with a lining, or with heavy material on a tape-bound frame without lining.

Generally, the outside of the shade consists of two similarly cut pieces of fabric. (If shade is extremely shaped or fabric striped, it may require more pieces. However, the following instructions can be adapted for use even when you cut a separate piece of fabric from spoke to spoke for each side.)

Cut fabric on bias or straight, leaving at least one-half inch for hemming and turning on all sides. Cutting a paper pattern first one-half the size of the frame is advisable.

Fit fabric over frame. Turn down one-half inch over top wire and pin in position with vertical pins. Begin pinning at center of fabric and center of one-half of frame, working toward sides, pulling fabric taut over frame as you go.

When you have pinned top, pull fabric snugly down over outside of frame and turn up allowance at bottom over bottom wire. Here again, work from center to sides. Trim off all but the ¼-inch allowance. Seam with tiny running stitches directly under wire, forming a self-trim similar to a corded edge. If you plan to bind top and bottom wires, overcast instead.

Pin sides to spokes of frame at each side, pulling taut. Finish other half of shade in same way. Secure pinned edges to side spokes with over-and-over stitch the entire seam length. This will appear on right side of shade and must be concealed with decorative binding.

Make binding of bias strips of ¾-inch width. Lay bias strip parallel to seam and stitch down one side ¼-inch to left of seam with tiny running stitches. Now turn other edge of bias over this seam and turn a ¼-inch edge under. Hem down with tiny stitches.

If you line a shade, cut two lining pieces and apply to inside as outlined above with pins. When you've fitted and trimmed lining, remove and stitch the two pieces together at the sides. Return to shade, turn under raw edges, and slip-stitch in.

DEAR ANNE:

I wonder if you would print in your column the address of the "Doll's Hospital" I believe you once mentioned? I would deeply appreciate it as my little girl's Christmas doll has had its eyes broken and she is most unhappy about it.

Mrs. G. F., Patuxtent River, Md.

Addresses of two local doll hospitals—either of which can restore vision to sightless dollies—are: 707 12th st., nw., and 1009 19th st., nw.

He remained there until 1942. He was assigned for short periods at the Thirteenth and Second Precincts and in 1945 was assigned to the Fifth Precinct.

Lieut. King retired after one of the longest tenures of any policeman. The men who worked under him described him as "the best, most reasonable" officer in the department.

The lieutenant had many hobbies—particularly raising foxhounds.

In his honor flags at all precinct houses will fly at half-mast until after the funeral.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Culena Thorn King; a son, James B. King, of Silver Spring; two daughters, Mrs. John Davis and Mrs. Harry Motley, of Washington; five brothers, Wyvon King, of Silver Spring; Vernnon and Thomas King, of Washington; Russell, of Pennsylvania, and Washington King, of Baltimore, and seven grandchildren.

The body will lie in state after 4 p. m. today at the home of Mrs. Davis, 713 17th st. se. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

'Stoopnagle,' Radio Comic, Is Dead at 52

Boston, May 29 (U.P.).—Frederick Chase Taylor, 52, the famed "Colonel Stoopnagle" of radio, died this afternoon at New England Baptist Hospital where he was admitted two weeks ago for treatment of an internal ailment.

Mr. Taylor

Taylor, a resident of South Norwalk, Conn., burst upon the national radio scene in the early 1930s as a refreshing personality self-dubbed Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle. From then on he was Stoopnagle or "Stoop" to friends as well as fans. He was fond of odd-sounding names.

Teaming with Announcer Wilbur Budd Hulick back in 1930, their radio program of "Stoopnagle and Budd" became household words throughout the country.

Taylor's radio career was something of an accident. Born in Buffalo, N. Y. on October 4, 1897, of a well-to-do family, he was destined for his father's lumber business after schooling at the University of Rochester and a hitch in the United States Naval Reserve during World War I. He left lumber to become vice president of a brokerage firm, but his heart was in writing and amateur dramatics and shortly he was doing comedy work as a sideline on Buffalo stations.

Gradually he quit the brokerage firm for a full-time job with the Buffalo Broadcasting Corp. He was actor, writer, production man and announcer.

Taylor's first wife was the former Lois de Ridder of Rochester, N. Y. He divorced her in 1936 and shortly afterward married Kay Bell, a former newspaperwoman.

Do you desire your RAMBLER in a rural setting or in an exclusive suburban community? We are fortunate in having the answer to either question. Each has 3 bedrooms, each has a garage, each has, of course, a large living room with fireplace, one has 2 full baths, the other a bath and a half. One is situated on approximately ¾-acre, the other on approximately ½-acre. Each has its own special features to be found upon your personal inspection. We find it difficult to make a choice. Walter Winchell —In New York

Case of the Absent-Minded Professor

Sixty months have passed since V-E Day. For almost as long, we have been warning the American public (in this space and over the air) that official American policy is again leading Germany down the road to Nazism and war . . . Our Government has neither denazified nor democratized Germany . . . One of the principal reasons for our failure is the State Department's "talent" for selecting Occupation officials who are guilty of muddled thinking—to say the least—with respect to Nazism and the responsibility of the German people for two world wars in one generation.

More than three years ago the American Occupation Forces ordered the German cartels broken up . . . But General Clay's assistant, Maj. Gen. William H. Draper (who was put in charge of the job), didn't see things that way . . . Last year an official United States investigating committee charged that Clay's top advisers had disobeyed United States Government orders to break up German monopolies . . . The committee placed the blame squarely upon Draper and his aides, Lawrence Wilkinson, Philip Morgan, Richardson Bronson . . . Wilkinson, then chief economic adviser to General Clay, had frequently declared himself "not in sympathy" with the Allied Occupation policy and pooh-poohed the committee's report as "low comedy"!

Now take (and you can have him) Benjamin J. Buttenwieser, Assistant United States High Commissioner for Germany . . . This gentleman was appointed to his post a bare eight months ago . . . Yet he came before the American public last week and dared not only to say that "Nazism has been destroyed" (which claim is given the lie by every competent American reporter on Germany) but to excuse the return of Nazis to important positions in the political, economic and educational life of Germany.

The other week, we noted that in a book published fifteen years ago Dr. George Nauman Shuster (Prexy of Hunter College) had described Adolf Hitler as, among other things, "a greatly perplexed, honestly inquiring, and quite unsteady young man . . . a genial boss . . . with a reputation for moderateness and kindliness." And we suggested that these sentiments undoubtedly "qualified" Shuster for his recent appointment as United States High Commissioner for Bavaria.

Now comes a seven-page letter from Dr. Shuster, who says we misquoted him and that he has an untarnished anti-Nazi record . . . Let it be said here and now that Dr. Shuster has frequently, over the years, made clear his opposition to all kinds of totalitarianism. But at the same time he has shown constant confusion with regard to the German problem.

We wish Dr. Shuster had said something about his book, "The Germans," published in 1932 . . . On Page 262 of this volume the author (speaking about Der Fuehrer) said: "There is no doubt of his efficiency, or his bravery, or, in spite of inconsistencies, his integrity." (Webster's "New International Dictionary" defines "integrity" as: "Moral soundness, honesty, freedom from corrupting influence or practice.")

Here's the blitz: On May 11, 1933, Dr. Shuster delivered a lecture on Germany in which he said that Hitler was "no monster" . . . According to the "N. Y. Staatszeitung," Shuster declared that had it not been for Hitler ". . . bloody excesses inside Germany could not have been avoided."

In his letter to us Shuster said: "You have been induced to print that I said, in 'Strong Man Rules' that 'Hitler is our friend.' Now it is a fearful chore to reread a book one has written many years ago but I have done so. There is no such statement in the book, or indeed, in anything I have written."

Let's take a look at Page 40 in "Strong Man Rules," written by George N. Shuster in 1934: "Hitler is a politician of whom it might be said that if he had not existed, it would have been necessary to invert him. Hitler is our friend, the old soldier, destined to go down in history as a cross between Hotspur and Uncle Toby and to be as immortal as either. Hitler is not a German. Hitler is and has been a greatly perplexed, honestly inquiring and quite unsteady young man. Those are a few of the plain facts . . ."

Let's continue. From Page 41: "For from the beginning Hitler has been a political field marshal—a genial boss who discusses the smallest party maneuver in terms of the General Staff and who begs his men to die bravely, though the action in sight is no more serious than taking up a collection" . . . (Wow!)

Dr. Shuster will be responsible in his post for educating Germans not to make war again . . . But Dr. Shuster has excused Germany from responsibility for World War I. Look at this on page 37 of "Strong Man Rules": "Taking away the few colonies which had been given to Germany . . . was an offense against social ethic . . . Limiting the fighting strength (of Germany) . . . was likewise so noble a service to humanity that it is quite beyond the comprehension of amateurs like myself. The final meaning of these deeds was that Germany . . . would not have room in which to live" . . . The old Lebensraum argument!

Dr. Shuster writes on Page 56 of the same book: "Frankly, I think that the record tends to show the United States the most militaristic of western peoples. At least there is no other which has fought so many wars from which it could have abstained."

We repeat: Dr. Shuster is not a Nazi. He is an American professor of English who puts together pretty prose, even if sometimes he can't remember what he's written. He belongs in a college lecture hall, perhaps—but not in the post of United States Commissioner for Bavaria, where Nazism was born and where German nationalism is now revived to a prewar pitch . . . Two wars too many have been fought—and too many men have died because we've been muddle-headed about Germany . . . The problem is simply too big for the Drapers, the Buttenwiesers and the Shusters.

But not all Americans are soft-headed. Eight U. S. Senators have introduced Senate Resolution No. 260 calling on the President to appoint a commission to investigate the terrible mistakes we've made in Germany. Please wire or write your Senator immediately to vote for this resolution. And enclose this documented indictment.

Faith Is Power

I Asked Only to Do My Accepted Duty

This is the second in a series of six installments condensed from the book, "Faith Is Power—For You" by Dr. Daniel A. Poling. It describes the first "answer" Dr. Poling had to a prayer.

By Dr. Daniel A. Poling

CHAPTER TWO

This story is the story of my faith. It is the story of how one man found peace with power. It is factual and inevitably it is very personal.

It is written with a sense of mission—to share with others a reality that through all the varying fortunes of life has never failed. Prayer can be your answer, as I tell you how and where it has been mine.

I do not remember my first prayer, but I do remember my first answer.

I was a junior in college when I became the representative of my school in a State oratorical contest. On Sunday before the Friday of the contest I developed a severe cold and on Monday should have remained in bed. By Tuesday I had a mounting fever and in the evening when the doctor came and named my trouble "grippe," I was without a voice and in black despair.

Through Wednesday the fever stood high and there were further complications. That night I was semidelirious.

Thursday morning something happened. First, I stopped my frantic regretting and began to think with a purpose.

At my head hung a wall motto —silver letters on a green card spelling out these words from the Old Testament:

"There hath not failed one word of all His good promise."

Perhaps I do not know what impelled me, but I do know what I did. I rolled out of bed and, on my knees, with my burning face buried in the covers that should have been over me, I prayed.

After more than 40 years I remember that prayer. I prayed to be ready and able to speak on Friday night. At whatever cost I asked for that.

Prayer Was Right

Not to win but to be there, in my place and with voice and strength enough not to let my college down. After these years I know the prayer was right.

I did not ask for anything to the deteriment of any other person. I asked only that I be able to do my assigned and accepted duty.

I got back into bed, pulled the covers under my chin, and had the answer to that prayer for the doctor when he came. I knew that I would speak on Friday night.

But when I told the doctor, told him with a grin that I was going to deliver my oration the next night, he very positively gave me the negative with all the particulars.

Strangely enough, what he said did not trouble me. But a few hours later when the fever broke and I went into the great sweat that dropped me into the depths, I had a finish fight with doubt.

Then I discovered what I have never since lost: that in weakness God is a man's strength and that His strength is matured and perfected for us in our weakness.

The physiologist and psychiatrist have their answer for what happened and indeed for much that I will relate. But with those answers fully evaluated, acknowledged, and appreciated, there is something more—something more that I discovered and experienced before the student oratorical contest in Dallas, Oreg.

It is the "something more" that I would share with you, because it has given me not only peace of mind and peace of soul, but because this peace is peace with power in and over every circumstance of life.

I delievered my oration. The doctor himself—after he capitulated—aided and abetted me, I did everything he advised and took everything he prescribed, including double shots of strychnine.

The fortunes of the drawing made me the first speaker.

Letter-Perfect.

I came on, was letter-perfect in my delivery if wobbly in my knees, and got off the stage before taking what is called a "nose dive" now, but was just an old-fashioned collapse then. The nearest bed was in the Methodist parsonage and there I went to stay awhile.

You understand that winning the contest was another matter altogether, I had not asked for that. Even then I knew that such a prayer is a wrong prayer, always a wrong prayer in such a case.

For it is a prayer against men who are your associates and comrades as well as your competitors.

"May the best man win" should go with you when you kneel as well as when you run.

To pray for the victory over your own weakness, to pray that you will be at your best and do your best is always the right prayer.

But to pray for victory without regard is always a wrong prayer. This right prayer is the prayer of Notre Dame football teams in our time when they go to mass before a game, just as it was the prayer under the goal posts at Princeton in the time of Robert E. Speer.

But why the doctor at all? Why his aid along with the strychnine if God had taken over?

For me the answer to that question is found in the New Testament: "But know ye not, o, vain man, that faith without works is dead?"

Here enters, I know, the conflict with a great group of sincere men and women who pray and for men and women who pray and for whom I have only high regard.

But I do not join the conflict.

I have a story to tell and it is mine. It is one man's humbly recited experience.

It is not a debate; it is not a philosophical dissertation; and I join no argument nor do I have a part with those who condemn or even belittle others whose prayer pattern and whose faith differ from mine.

Tomorrow: The son who said "Don't pray for my safe return."

2 Die as Tavern Is Blown Into Air

Joliet, Ill., May 29 (AP).—A mystery blast shot the Ritz Tavern 30 to 50 feet into the air yesterday, killed two persons, injured two others and damaged four homes. Damage was $30,000.

The dead were Gerald I. Dodds, 54, contractor, and Joseph Riva, 64, tavern owner. Dodds, excavating alongside the tavern, had run into an illuminating gas line, but the break was repaired. The site formerly was used as a gasoline station. Firemen theorized underground tanks might have been ignited.

Sen. McKellar Better

Senator McKellar (D., Tenn.) returned to his hotel apartment yesterday under instructions from his doctor to continue to rest after undergoing treatment at Emergency Hospital. McKellar entered the hospital Friday after he failed to shake off a cold.

'Block That Metaphor'

TV Shouldn't Suffer Some of the Politicos

By John Crosby

A POLITICO of some sort, whose name I didn't quite catch, was being interviewed on NBC's television News Caravan the other night and he said, among other things: "We must not get intoxicated with the heady wine of chauvanism." I'm inclined to agree. But I'd like to add that politicos had better not get intoxicated with the heady wine of metaphor, either. At least they had better not indulge in their favorite tipple in front of a television camera.

The voter may get the idea that the politico has nothing to say and is saying it at great length. However, if I were a voter—and come to think of it, I am—I'd insist that politicos get on TV so that I could get a good clear look at them. You can learn more about a politico in 5 minutes of TV than in 10 years of headlines. You get the full locked-in goodness of him, the delightful crackly-crunchy taste. You can, for example, see how mild a politico can be, how slow-acting.

And, after observing it, you may discover that this locked-in flavor is not quite what you want in a statesman, that, conceivably, intelligence is preferable to the rich, full flavor of metaphor.

THERE'S a song doing the rounds that you can scarcely have avoided called "Enjoy Yourself. It's Later Than You Think." (My favorite version of the song is that of John K. M. McCaffrey—"Enjoy Yourself. It's Too Late.")

I'm bringing this up now because radio used to be quite severe about songs. Time was that a lot of Cole Porter's songs couldn't be played on network radio. H. L. Mencken in "The American Language" points out that it took radio to decide that the verb "to do" was immoral. That decision knocked three of oPrter's songs off the aid—"Let's Do It," "You Do Something To Me" and "Do It Again." The word "thing" was also considered indecent, which threw off the air another good Cole Porter song—"You've Got That Thing."

I'm by nature opposed to censorship of any sort and I'm all for people enjoying themselves, even if it isn't quite as late as they think. Still, I'd rather question the sense of values that permits "Enjoy Yourself" and prohibits "You Got That Thing," which is a very good song, indeed.

I consider "Enjoy Yourself" one of the most downright immoral songs I ever heard and, if radio has relaxed its rules to such an extent as to permit the darn thing, then I am going to dust off one of my old songs which I had long since despaired of ever getting on the air. It's called "Gomorrah and Gomorrah and Gomorrah," and, brother, do people enjoy themselves in that song. In fact, the bartenders won't even let me sing it in saloons.

"The Thin Man," a detective series with a long radio career, is being brought back to serve as the vacation replacement for "Ozzie and Harriet" beginning June 23 on ABC.

"Detour," psychological drama, will be the replacement for "Sherlock Holmes" on ABC from June 21.

Don Ameche is to be emcee of the ABC "Breakfast Club" for six weeks beginning June 26 while Don McNeill and family take a vacation in Europe.

Eddie Cantor, having completed his assignment with Take It or Leave It of NBC, to be succeeded next Sunday by Jack Parr, is sailing this week with his wife, Ida, for Europe.

On television—"Suspense" will turn its CBS-TV time over to "The Webb," another mystery, on July 11 for the summer . . . Holiday Hotel, Edward Everett Horton's comedy on ABC-TV, will be on vacation from June 16 to September 14 . . . the Alan Young Video comedy, recently introduced, is to be run through the summer.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

She Has No Objection to Sunday Baseball

There were about a dozen of them, mostly in their 'teens.

T-shirts and rolled up pants legs were the uniform of the day. Most of them carried baseball gloves; a few had bats and balls.

As they passed 16th and Decatur, they were making what might be considered a nominal amount of noise for a baseball team.

But their horseplay was cut short when the window of a nearby house went up and a woman called out: "You boys there—who's the boss of that outfit?"

There was deep silence as the ballplayers thought it over.

"Well, speak up," said the woman. "You've got a manager or a captain, haven't you?"

Julius Segal, graduate psychology student at Catholic University and the only adult in the bunch, figured he might as well face the music.

"This is a breakfast group I've been serving as moderator," he explained. "I guess we were a little too exuberant for so early on Sunday morning, and I apologize. I'm sorry we disturbed you."

"Oh, nonsense," said the woman at the window. "You didn't disturb me—I just wanted to give you this league baseball."

When I heard about the incident and called Segal to verify it, the story got even better. He said:

"Yep, that's exactly what happened. And when we thanked her for the ball, she said to think nothing of it; if we'd drop around later in the week, she'd give us some passes for a Nats game.

"We were practically speechless. How were we to know that the lady at the window was Mrs. Clark Griffith?"

Mrs. Griff laughed when I checked with her. "Don't print the story," she asked, "or I'll have all the boys in the neighborhood after me for balls and passes."

I told her I'd get fired if I suppressed a good story, so she finally relented. But she wouldn't pose for a picture. "I don't think Mr. Griffith would like it."

"Do you watch the Nats on television?" I asked.

"I'm not a television fan," she snapped. "Every day I'm well enough, you'll find me right out there at the Stadium rooting for the Nats. I've been a baseball fan for 50 years. Next time you're at a game, stop by Box 94 and say hello."

"I'll do that," I promised.

"And give my regards to Shirley Povich," she added. "He's a fine young fellow."

Shirley, who is getting grey around the temples, says he deeply appreciates Mrs. Griff's choice of words.

"It has been some time," muses Mr. Baseball, "since anybody called me a young fellow."

GIVE-AWAYS

"Several beautiful, healthy kittens." (Hobart 7543).

"Lovable dog, part cocker." (Chestnut 9394).

"Two well-behaved 8-week-old kittens." (Wisconsin 7172).

"Three kittens, 6 and 11 weeks old; all part-Persian." (Jackson 2-5081 after 6 p. m.)

"Complete set of grates for Capitol (U. S. Radiator) furnace; 5-inch stovepipe, three joints, two elbows; 35 used window panes, 10x12 inches." (Union 1466).

EVERYBODY WINS

Robert L. Hertzman of 4014 Kansas ave. nw., severely wounded during Infantry service in Italy, is now an attorney with the Eternal Revenue Bureau here. (Dear Mr. Proofreader: Don't change "eternal" to "infernal," please. For once, let me use my own version of the joke.)

Two years ago, around Memorial Day, Bob was strolling down the street back home in Louisville.

"Buy a poppy, mister," suggested a little girl working for the DAV drive.

"Why should I buy a poppy?" asked Bob, who had been lost in other thoughts.

"To help the disabled veterans," explained the little girl.

"But I'm a disabled veteran myself," protested Bob. "Do you want me to buy a poppy to help myself?"

"Sure," said the child promptly. "Give me a quarter for a poppy, the Disabled Veterans will give you back your quarter, and you'll end up with a free poppy."

Bob shucked out the quarter and allowed as how there's no escape from a determined woman.

PUN FUN

Mrs. Webb Taylor of Riverdale, Md., wonders whether the jokes that pop into her mind from time to time should be called "pop corn."

THE BOSS (?)

My Daddy used to be the boss . . . At least, that's what he told me . . . But not no more, he ain't I'll bet . . . Just come around and see . . . You'll find him with an apron on . . . While Mommy's at the club . . . He's washing dishes at the sink . . . And he ain't smilin', bub.

Albanian Reds Claim 97.9 Pct. of Votes

London, May 29 (AP).—Tirana radio tonight reported the ruling Communists received an overwhelming vote in Albania's 1950 single-ticket parliamentary elections.

The voting took place yesterday. The radio said incomplete returns showed the Communists won the indorsement of 97.9 percent to 99.63 percent of the voters.

Albania is under a tight dictatorship headed by Enver Hoxha. His candidates ran under the label of "the Democratic Front." The radio account did not explain where the other votes went.

Acheson-Schuman Assist Cited

By Drew Pearson

Most important job put across by Dean Acheson during the Big Three conference was at a private Lancaster House talk with Ernie Bevin. Actually, the talk took place before the Big Three conference started and had to do with the all-important, but oh, so tender question of a British blessing for the proposed French-German iron-coal pool.

Pearson

Before talking to Bevin, Acheson had been in Paris where Foreign Minister Schuman had also discussed his plan for the French-German pooling of iron and coal, and had expressed the fear that the British would be opposed. So he asked Acheson's help.

Personalities sometimes play a big part in molding the peace of the world. One personal factor regarding the Big Three is that Acheson and Schuman instinctively like each other. Furthermore, Schuman, born in Alsace, a province that has been shunted back and forth between Germany and France for almost a century, realizes the vital importance of French-German cooperation.

As a boy Schuman learned to speak German together with French. When he grew up he served in the German army in World War I. He didn't want to serve, but he had to. Now, as a Foreign Minister of France, he believes that the two countries which have bled each other white three times in 85 years must learn to live in peace.

And the key to peace is cooperation regarding the iron and coal of the Ruhr and Rhineland.

Acheson Convinces Bevin

That, in brief, was the thesis which Foreign Minister Schuman sold Acheson, and it didn't take too much selling. Acheson was strong for it.

The real selling was when Acheson met Ernie Bevin in London. Here again personalities entered the picture. The British consider Acheson a stanch friend. His mother was a Canadian, a member of the wealthy Gooderham-Hiram Walker whisky distilling family, and unquestionably many of his policies have been strongly pro-British.

Therefore, when Foreign Minister Bevin started kicking over the traces against the Schuman plan, he found himself facing the persuasive arguments of a friend.

Bevin didn't like the economic union of western Europe for several reasons, one of them being that the British Labor government must operate under fixed prices with a protected market, and can't compete well with the free mass market of a European economic union.

Another reason is Britain's traditional balance-of-power policy of playing France and Germany against each other.

However, Acheson, during his private Lancaster House conference, pointed out that cooperation between France and Germany was the only hope for future European peace and finally won the belligerent British Foreign Minister around.

To show good faith, Prime Minister Attlee next day made a guarded statement in the House of Commons favoring the Schuman plan.

British Sabotage?

However, State Department officials are now worried over diplomatic grapevine reports that the British have started working backstage to scuttle the Schuman plan. Substantiation of these reports comes from John F. Reynolds, a London observer with his pulse on the Foreign Office, who writes:

"Now that the series of London conferences is over, the Foreign Office is facing one of its stiffest tasks. M. Monnet, the French expert, has explained the (Schuman) plan to pool western Europe's heavy industries, a technical committee of international experts will get busy to work out details, and it will be up to the Foreign Office to stifle the plan.

"It will not be killed outright, but will be softened considerably.

"Though Mr. Attlee has welcomed the French initiative as a valuable contribution to the promotion of European unity, both the Foreign Office and the treasury are worried.

"On the international coal and steel authority, which would run the pool, Britain would be in a hopeless minority. Not only would this mean the beginning of the end of Britain's sovereignty, but it would also seriously threaten Labor's policy of economic planning and nationalization, for neither Germany nor France are inclined to change their present economic system, which is non-Socialist."

So it looks as if Dean Acheson would have to exert his friendly influence on the British all over again.
